Plot to Trap Soviet Laid To Neutrals By Vishinsky

He Denounces Bid To Answer Query On Berlin, Slams Compromise Door

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—Andrei Y. Vishinsky today broke Russia's silence in the Security Council's Berlin debate—but only to slam the door in the face of six neutral countries pressing for an East-West compromise.

Rising dramatically in a tense Council meeting, Vishinsky accused the neutrals of maneuvering to trap Russia into taking part in the debate by inviting him to answer questions. "It is naive to believe that the Soviet Union will swallow this bait," he said. "No, gentlemen, we will not."

Vishinsky repeated the Russian argument that the Council had no business discussing Berlin. Then he smiled at his aides, sat down and resumed doodling—his principal pastime during the verbal boycott.

The neutral delegates bristled. Council President Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina tossed aside diplomatic niceties and with clenched fists told Vishinsky that he could not accuse the neutrals of double-dealing and "devious motives."

Means No Reflection

Vishinsky fidgeted. Later he said he was not apologizing but had not meant to reflect on the character of any delegate.

The other neutral countries—Canada, China, Colombia, Syria and Belgium—said they fully supported Bramuglia, who acted as their spokesman in contacting Russia and the Western Powers in mediation efforts. A British spokesman said Vishinsky's speech slammed the door on mediation.

Vishinsky was prodded into breaking his Kremlin-ordered silence by Bramuglia's request that the four big powers answer questions on the Soviet blockade of Berlin and the direct negotiations in the Kremlin. The United States, Britain and France quickly agreed.

After the bitter exchanges, the Council adjourned until next Tuesday with no positive indication of what would happen. Poland's Oscar Lange indicated to newsmen that Vishinsky would veto any decision the Council might take contrary to Russian desires.

The upshot of today's meeting is that the East and the West are as far apart as ever on the Berlin case with each side sticking to old positions.

Bramuglia has been trying since October 6 to find a solution on behalf of the six Council nations not directly involved. The other Council members are the United States, Russia, Britain, France and the Soviet Ukraine. Today he said the neutrals wanted to ask these questions:

1. Would the United States, France, Britain and Russia explain how the restrictions (blockade) in Berlin were imposed, giving details?

2. Would the four powers explain the Moscow agreement of August 30 in which instructions were given to the military governors in Berlin and why these were not carried out?

The August 30 agreement formed the basis on which the West said the blockade could be lifted but the West charged that Russia refused to carry out the pact by adding a demand for control of the airlift.

Martin to Keep Old Promise: Fly With Mother Across U. S.

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Forty years ago Glenn L. Martin promised his mother that "some day, we'll fly across the country in one of our own planes."

Saturday—or shortly thereafter if the weather's bad—the airplane manufacturer and Mrs. Minta Martin, his 84-year-old mother will step into a sleek, speedy Martin 2-0-2 airliner to keep that pledge.

Mother and son plan to stop at Topeka, Kans., and at Salina, Kans., their old home, to visit friends and former neighbors. After stops at Tulsa, Okla., and Phoenix, Ariz., the Martin 2-0-2 will land at Santa Ana, Calif., where Martin built his first plane, a frail contraption of wood, bamboo and muslin.

As the son slaved away on it in an abandoned church—(nights, because he worked in a garage) the mother often held a kerosene lamp for him. That was around 1909.

Two or three years later she demonstrated her confidence in her boy's handiwork by going up with him in the one-seat craft. Perched on the edge of a wing, holding on to straps, Mrs. Martin was probably the first mother of an aviator in those pioneering days to take to the air with her son.

Russia Agrees To Distribute U. S. Movies

Payment in Dollars, No Reciprocal Deal Made, Johnston Says

London, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Eric Johnston, president of the United States Motion Picture Association, announced today that Soviet authorities have agreed to distribute American motion pictures in Russia.

Johnston recently visited Moscow. Today he said the Soviet government had agreed to a three-point movie-purchase plan:

1. Pictures distributed in Russia will be paid for in dollars.

2. We will present them with a list of films, from which they may choose what they like.

3. America will not be forced to take Soviet films in return.

He said precautions would be taken to prevent the Russians from using the films for propaganda purposes.

On his recent tour of Europe, the film executive reported he also sold films to Yugoslav and Czechoslovak authorities.

Trucker Warns Autos in 10-Ton Dynamite Blast

Tamaqua, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—Ten tons of dynamite loaded aboard a truck exploded today and ripped the truck into little pieces.

The truck driver, E. W. Petty of Little Rock, Ark., prevented possible loss of life by running back and forth to head off motorists after he saw smoke and flames shoot from the truck.

No one was injured in the blast near Tamaqua, but the force of the explosion:

Ripped a hole 60 feet long, 40 feet wide and 12 feet deep in the macadam highway.

Hurled the truck's motor 1000 feet into a nearby wooded area.

Snapped the tops off trees.

Shattered windows in towns five miles away.

Patent Granted On Device to Let Blind Read Print

An electronic device designed to permit the blind to "read" printed matter is among the 591 inventions and improvements receiving U. S. patents this week.

The instrument was developed by Vladimir K. Zworykin, Princeton, N. J., and James Hillier, Cranbury, N. J., who have assigned the patent to Radio Corporation

The device—called an optophone—produces an audible tone, the pitch of which varies as a moving spot of light focuses on printed matter.

Newsmen Get Assurances on Loyalty Probe

Promise of Guard Against Misuse Given By Defense Officials

Defense officials yesterday promised to guard against misuse of the new program under which news correspondents covering military affairs at home or abroad would be subjected to a loyalty investigation.

That assurance was given to representatives of the American Newspaper Guild at a conference with Defense Secretary James Forrestal and other defense officials.

The ANG delegation raised the question whether the loyalty check might be used to force the dismissal of reporters for purely personal reasons, having nothing to do with their loyalty.

Spokesmen for the Guild group indicated they intend to study the matter further.

They said they assured the defense officials the Guild is anti-Communist.

5 Florida Officials Indicted on Civil Rights Charges

Miami, Fla., Oct. 15 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today indicted four Palm Beach County police officers and a special agent of the Florida East Coast Railroad in connection with the beating of a Negro prisoner.

All five are accused of violating the Civil Rights laws.

They are John T. Britt, Riviera Beach police chief; Euell M. Culbreth and Walter I. Minton, Palm Beach County deputy sheriffs, and William M. Barnes, West Palm Beach patrolman, and Worden Ashur Bader, a special agent for the FEC.

The Negro is Alton Fowler, 24. According to the complaint, Fowler was taken into custody March 13. He was accused of stealing cigarettes from an interstate shipment on FEC boxcars.

400 Are Stricken In Army Camp After Eating

Denver, Oct. 15 (AP).—Four hundred soldiers at Lowry Field are suffering from an unidentified intestinal disorder, the Air Force reported today.

Twenty-five soldiers were hospitalized. The disorder was tentatively diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning. Half the men became ill yesterday and the other 200 were stricken today.

An Army spokesman reported approximately 1000 others ate in the same mess but only armament school students were stricken.

Arabs, Jews Want Peace, U. N. Is Told

Interim Mediator Urges Guidance, Backs Bernadotte Commission Plan

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—Ralph Bunche today declared the "time is ripe for a settlement in Palestine," and urged the United Nations to guide the Jews and Arabs toward peace.

The American Negro, interim U. N. mediator for the Holy Land, suggested that the United Nations make clear its position on the main political issues and leave to the Jews and Arabs "the burden of peaceful adjustment." Bunche supported the last report of Count Folke Bernadotte, the assassinated mediator, which calls for a conciliation commission to help carry out U. N. decisions on Palestine's future.

Desire on Both Sides

Bunche told the Assembly's 58-nation political committee that "on both sides there is desire and need for peace."

Bunche emphasized that any settlement would have to be based on the existence of the new Jewish state. He said Israel is "no paper state" but a "vibrant reality" which could only be destroyed by a force sufficient to "crush the Jewish community."

Bunche said the two most urgent needs in solving the Palestine problem were:

1. A reasonable basis for the assumption that neither party will again resort to force. He said there was hope to be found for this.

Lists Political Issues

2. The Assembly should set forth its position on the fundamental political issues. These he listed as including permanent peace in Palestine, the Jewish state, its boundaries, the future of Jerusalem, international guarantees of boundaries, guarantees of the rights of all Palestinians, and repatriation and resettlement of Arab refugees.

He said Bernadotte felt neither Jews nor Arabs would defy a firm position by the Assembly on the political aspects.

The opening debate lasted less than two hours with Jews and Arabs asking for more time to prepare their arguments. The discussion is expected to be put off in the committee for several days to clear the way for resumption of debate on atomic energy.

Jewish Convoys Strafed By Egyptian Planes

Tel Aviv, Israel, Oct. 15 (AP).—Egyptian troops and planes smashed and strafed Jewish convoys in the Negev desert today and Israeli planes counterattacked Egyptian bases, an Army communique announced tonight.

Some United Nations observers privately expressed the fear "the war's on again."

The government clamped on a rigid blackout throughout the nation, including Jerusalem, just before it was announced that Jewish planes had gone into action against the Egyptians in southern Palestine.

It was the first general blackout in Israel's history.

Premier David Ben-Gurion hurried to government house in a Tel Aviv suburb tonight for conference with top advisers.

The Israeli army announcement said Egyptian troops attacked with mortars and artillery a convoy of 16 food trucks and patrol and escort cars 80 miles south of Tel Aviv. The Jews tried to rush the convoy through to 23 desert colonies. Two trucks were burned, others damaged, several Jews were killed and wounded, and the rest of the convoy turned back, an army spokesman added.

Truman Puts Rep. Halleck 'On the Pan'

Crowds Impress Political Experts In Home State Of House Leader

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Indianapolis, Oct. 15.—President Truman appealed to Indiana's split political personality today with bouquets for his all-Hoosier, all-day Democratic train crew and scallions for House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck, whose home State this is.

Then, at an open air rally in Indianapolis tonight he heaped ridicule on Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

Crowds that poured out to meet him along the way were no surprise to the State's Democratic boss, big bluff National Committeeman Frank McHale who rode the special into Indianapolis.

McHale said a "ground swell" has developed for Truman in the last two weeks, and added:

"This election could be the greatest upset in political history."

Mr. Truman continued his running attack on Governor Dewey and the Republican record in front of Indianapolis' towering War Memorial tonight.

Sardonically, he apologized for offending and even "startling" the Governor by talking about depressions but said Dewey was a little "mixed up."

"The thing that helps the Communists is not talking about a depression," he said. "The thing that would help the Communists is having a depression."

Crowds Impressive

He charged the Communists are rooting for a Republican victory because they know it would bring on another "great depression."

More than 50,000 persons packed the plaza in front of the square limestone column erected for Indiana's World War I dead. The President spoke from a flag-draped wooden stand on the steps of the memorial.

A winding torchlight parade preceded the speech. The great crowd laughed and cheered when he asked why Governor Dewey never "pointed with pride" to the administrations of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. He likened the GOP to a fire company "too busy playing political checkers to put out the blaze" of inflation.

It wasn't the President's continued GOP needling, but the crowds that turned out to greet him, that impressed newsmen today.

This paradoxical State, which gave Willkie and Dewey big majorities and is still voting pro-Dewey in the polls, trooped down to the President's special in numbers that confounded the experts.

They cheered his train all the way into Indianapolis. At Tipton, Ind., the cheers even drowned out a mechanical "booing machine."

Squawks came from a loudspeaker rigged up on the one-story Abso Pure Ice and Fuel building, until a Secret Service man cut a wire leading to the contrivance.

"It sounds like the Russians trying to mess up a 'Voice of America' broadcast," the President commented.

Praise for Train Crew

Mr. Truman, getting used to his increasing box office, told the gaping crowds they "deserved" the Eighteith Congress, and even its "backward" leader, because they failed to turn out in like numbers at the 1946 polls.

As he entered the State with a

Dewey 2-Party Policy Claim Extravagant, Hull Declares

Former Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night accused Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of making an incorrect statement regarding origin of the bipartisan foreign policy.

He said the statement by the Republican presidential nominee was only one of many in which there have been "extravagant claims for credit . . . for achievements which were the fruit of joint and patriotic effort by members of both political parties."

Dewey quickly replied, interrupting his speech at St. Paul to do so.

From his room at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital, Hull issued this statement:

"Speaking at Louisville on October 12, 1948, Governor Dewey said:

"'In this endeavor we have abandoned partisanship to speak through a bipartisan policy. That was the great objective when I first proposed to Secretary Hull during the election campaign four years ago that we have cooperation between our two parties to win the peace. That was the beginning of our bipartisan foreign policy.'

Will Inject Partisanship

"I am moved to comment upon this statement not simply because it is incorrect. Governor Dewey can easily refresh his memory of what actually took place by re-reading the newspapers of August and September, 1944.

"The melancholy importance of Governor Dewey's statement is that it is only the latest of many statements in which extravagant claims for credit have been made for achievements which were the fruit of joint and patriotic effort by members of both political parties. If these competitive claims continue, they will inject partisanship into the conduct of our foreign affairs quite as though the debate were directed toward the substance of our policies.

In Sharp Contrast

"I was particularly sorry to read Governor Dewey's statement, because it presents such a sharp contrast to the statement which he made in the same city four years ago. At that time he said:

"'So long as I have anything to say about it I shall insist on two things. First, that the American people shall be fully informed of our efforts to achieve and to keep the peace. Secondly, these matters shall never be subjects for partisan political advantage by any individual or by any party either in or out of power.'

"I heartily agreed with that statement then and recommend it now to all who speak for either party during the remainder of this campaign. For whichever party is returned to power next November, while it must assume the ultimate responsibility for the conduct of our foreign affairs, it must conduct them in a nonpartisan spirit and will need, as never before, the same nonpartisan cooperation from its political opponents."

Didn't Expose "Blunder"

Governor Dewey last night departed from his text in his St. Paul, Minn., speech to say that four years ago the choice fell to him whether to expose "some of the blunders" of the Roosevelt Administration in the foreign policy field and conduct of the war. That obviously was a reference to his decision not to expose the fact this country had broken the Japanese code before Pearl Harbor.

Dewey said, according to the Associated Press, that he had sent a representative to Hull at that time with the purpose of taking the question of foreign policy out of the realm of politics. Dewey added that Hull had "accepted this cooperation handsomely and we succeeded in lifting the whole matter out of partisanship."

He added: "That is how I did it and I would do it again."

The Gallup Poll

Independent Voters Favor Gov. Dewey

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 15.—The Nation's independent voters today favor the election of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

This is an important indication to political observers, since neither major party ordinarily has a majority exclusive of the following they get from independent voters.

Attitudes of these people today represent a sharp swing from the Democratic to the Republican side of the tally sheet. President Roosevelt's continued victories in national elections were based to a great extent upon the solid hold his leadership exercised over the approximately 1 voter in 5 who calls himself "independent."

Henry A. Wallace is almost twice as strong among independents as he is with all voters.

Analysis of current Institute national findings reveals that 19 per cent of those [illegible] likely to vote in November label themselves as independents. These voters were asked:

"If the presidential election were being held today—for whom would you vote—for Dewey, Truman, Wallace or for Thurmond?"

INDEPENDENT VOTERS

Dewey	47%
Truman	30
Wallace	7
Thurmond	1
Undecided	15

The Republicans have been attempting for 16 years to convince independent voters to support their candidates, but except for the 1946 congressional elections, Institute figures show that in that period the Democrats could always count on the vote of nearly 2 out of 3 independents. The following table which eliminates the undecided vote shows the swing of the pendulum from 1940 to 1948:

INDEPENDENT VOTERS

	1940	1944	TO-DAY
Reps	38%	39%	55%
Dems	62	61	35
Wallace	—	—	8
Thurmond	—	—	2

A review of past Institute studies of independent voters shows that these people are distributed among all occupation groups in the country. But the smallest proportion is found among farmers, with only 1 in 7 claiming to be independent as compared to about 1 in 4 among business and professional people, white collar workers and manual workers.

The Southern voting population contains proportionately fewer independents than any other geographical section. There, only 1 in 10 calls himself an independent voter.

Dewey Asks Support for Senator Ball, '44 Bolter

Minnesotans Told Race Is Important; Truman Accused of 'Deal With Aggressor

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 15.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey came to the rescue today of a Republican lawmaker who deserted him four years ago—United States Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, now seriously threatened with defeat.

The reunion of the two, which took place at Albert Lea, Minn., was marred by the second tomato incident of the week. Somebody in a crowd of 3500 hurled the missile while Governor Dewey and Senator Ball were posing for photographers on the rear platform of the "Victory Special."

The tomato struck Ball on the right shoulder. Fragments of it splattered Mrs. Dewey, who was standing at the Senator's side.

A disappointing crowd turned out in St. Paul Municipal Auditorium tonight to hear Governor Dewey put in his plug for Ball. It was estimated at between 6000 and 7000. The auditorium has a capacity of 12,500. Consequently, there were great empty areas reminiscent of President Truman's experience in Omaha last June.

Rain was falling and may have had something to do with the small turnout. Even so, Republican leaders were visibly embarrassed here in Harold Stassen's home town.

A few boos came from the gallery when Governor Dewey called for support of Senator Ball.

Appeals to Farmers

Governor Dewey, appealing to Minnesota farmers in a speech at Mankato, struck at his Democratic opposition for "making a political football out of the agriculture issue."

"It seems to me," he said, "that it is almost the lowest thing to which a person can sink, aside from personal abuse; and that is to make a political issue out of the food supply of 140 million American people and millions of hungry people who need our help."

Governor Dewey made no reference today to the fact that Ball bolted the GOP four years ago because of the foreign policy issue, and gave his support to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Traveling through the Minnesota farm belt, and again in a speech here tonight in St. Paul, Governor Dewey praised Ball as an "able, hard-working, constructive" member of the Senate, and expressed the "earnest hope" that he would be sent back to Washington for another six-year term.

Trade With Reds Charged

The Republican standard-bearer, who is himself given a 50-50 chance to get Minnesota's 11 electoral votes, promised the State's farmers that his administration would back strongly the price-support program, soil conservation and rural electrification.

There was nothing new in these promises. He had made them before, but Minnesota Republicans had beseeched him to come out here and make them on the ground for the benefit of hard-pressed Senator Ball.

In a talk at Owatonna, on the way here, he departed from his standard talk on foreign policy to hurl a new accusation at the Truman Administration.

He accused it of "making trades behind its hands with the forces of aggression," and of "making tremendous concessions to them."

Governor Dewey's aides said the candidate apparently was referring to President Truman's dealing

Production of 1-Shot Insulin For Severe Diabetes Revealed

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Development of a one-shot insulin for severe cases of diabetes that now require four or five injections daily was disclosed here yesterday by a Boston clinician.

Dr. White

The new insulin, tested clinically for almost two years, should be available to the public within six months, Dr. Priscilla White, associate of Boston's Joselin-Baker Clinic for diabetes, said. She identified it as NPH-50, product of the Eli Lilly pharmaceutical firm of Indianapolis.

Dr. White was in Washington as guest of the Diabetes Association of the District of Columbia, and was chief speaker at the association's public meeting last night in the District Medical Society Building.

The new insulin, she told guests at a luncheon meeting, is particularly valuable for child diabetics, since it will safely carry them through school hours. A child's constant anxiety of suffering "insulin shock" before his classmates is often more of a problem than the disease control itself, she pointed out.

NPH-50 begins its work of blood sugar reduction within two hours, carries on its maximum work from 12 to 18 hours after injection and continues to benefit for a total of 28 hours, she said. In contrast,

Norwegian Expert to Head Air Force Weather Science

The long arm of the United States Air Forces has reached into the frigid climes of upper Norway to head up its Air Weather Service's newly devised Scientific Services, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Sverre Petterssen, a 49-year-old authority on the behavior of the elements in a turbulent world, has resigned his post as deputy director of the Norwegian Weather Bureau to take the job.

In his new endeavor, the inordinately modest but congenial student of meteorology will be called upon to:

1. Survey and appraise all new developments in the field of meteorology.

2. Determine the requirements for research and development of new equipment and methods necessary to improve weather service.

3. Provide world-wide climatological data.

Acknowledging that he is by nature "publicity shy," Dr. Petterssen did not elaborate on the significance of his previous training in connection with his new job. He was content to speak little of himself, and referred a reporter to official release on his appointment.

Of his early interest in the thing everybody talks about, he said, "Those things just happen by chance." He did not say, however, that his birthplace in northern

Dr. Petterssen's 5-foot 5-inch height gives him an air of agile proficiency, and he has already established a solid front in his profession.

He is the author of several meteorological books and numerous scientific papers published in technical journals. One of his works, "Weather Analysis and Forecasting," is a standard textbook used internationally.

CAA Official Survives Plunge From Third Floor of Hotel

Ed J. Ryder, 37, chief of the Civil Aeronautics Administration structures section, yesterday was injured critically when he leaped from his third-floor hotel window in Winona, Minn., shortly before he was to testify at a plane-crash hearing.

The official, who was slated to appear at a Civil Aeronautics Board inquiry into the crash of a Northwest Airlines Martin 2-0-2 plane in which 37 perished last August 29, was taken to a hospital where doctors said he had suffered critical spine injuries.

According to the United Press, Ryder removed a screen from the window before he jumped. He landed on the hood of a parked automobile. A note in his room was addressed to a funeral director, police said.

Ryder's roommate, Albert A. Vollmecke, chief of the CAA's frame division, said he had attempted to enter the room shortly before noon but found the door locked.

Vollmecke said Ryder had been working "very hard" and had been upset over a recent divorce action by his wife. The couple was married in Arlington, Va., in 1936. An adopted daughter died about two years ago at the age of 3.

At the hearing which opened Thursday, it was testified that the plane's left wing apparently came off and slammed into the body of the plane.

CAA officials here said Ryder as structures chief passed on the design, strength and safety features of planes before they could be certified to be put into production.

The Martin 2-0-2 was certified last year and Northwestern had about 25 in operation. The planes

2 Bandits Get $43,000 In 2 Florida Payrolls

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Two bandits, operating separately but with similar boldness, escaped with payrolls with a total value of more than $43,000 in Tampa and Miami Beach today.

The Tampa gunman, his head shrouded in a sugar sack with dark glasses worn over the eye-holes, lifted a $24,270 payroll from women clerks at the Perfecto Garcia & Brothers cigar factory here.

Later in the day, another bandit robbed a plastering contractor of his $19,070 payroll on busy Lincoln rd. in Miami Beach and escaped in his victim's new automobile.

Tugwell Is Diner At Wallace Table

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—Rexford Guy Tugwell had dinner with Henry Wallace tonight and also made a brief talk of introduction today when Glen Taylor, Wallace's running mate on the Progressive Party ticket, spoke on the University of Chicago campus.

It was Tugwell's first public activity in connection with the Progressive Party since he told reporters August 10 that he was "an uneasy member" of the party because he feared the "wrong people" might get control.

Tugwell, former official in the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration, and chairman of the Progressive Party's platform committee during the party convention in July, is on the faculty of the university.

A reporter asked him today if he is taking an active part in the party.

He replied: "I'm not campaigning, if that's what you mean. I'm a professor. I don't have time for that."

"But you're still in the Progressive Party?"

"Oh, yes," he said.

Wallace said tonight that "bipartisan political machines" are "dangerous and subversive" and are increasing their power in America.

In a speech prepared for delivery at Sokol Chicago Hall, the third party presidential candidate said these Republican-Democrat machines operate on a National, State, county, and city level, that they are "corrupt," that they are in "cahoots with crime and graft" and are "utterly cynical and sinister."

Walace particularly attacked the two od parties in Illinois. He said they have kept his Progressive Party off the ballot in this State because it threatened their power.

At an earlier meeting with representatives of foreign language minority groups, Wallace said he has never told a single soul, not even his wife, how many votes he thinks the party is going to get November 2.

Truman Assails Rep. Halleck

special Logansport, Ind., train crew, the President contrasted his own friendly railway labor relations with Governor Dewey's Beaucoup, Ill., troubles with what Dewey called a "lunatic" engineer.

"The train crew on this train are all Democrats," Mr. Truman told the Logansport thousands.

"They took us over here at junction point 15 minutes late, and they got us here 5 minutes ahead of time. It takes a Democrat to do that."

"We've had wonderful train crews all around the country and they've been just as kind to us as they could possibly be."

But as he entered Indiana's Second Congressional District, which sent Halleck to Congress, he had this to say about the Hoosiers' choice in House leaders:

"While I like him personally, and I wouldn't want to injure him personally—politically I would like to put him out of business."

"He faces backwards instead of forwards. He has tried his best to turn the clock back ever since he has been in the Congress. He almost succeeded this time and I think the best way to keep him from ruining that clock would be just leaving it home this time."

More scallions came earlier at North Judsonville. There the President was presented big sacks of onions and potatoes. Looking at the onions, Mr. Truman laughed: "I think I'll peel these right under the Republicans' eyes."

Slap at Representative Harness

At Kokomo the crowds massed for blocks around the train. Asked for a crowd estimate, Police Officer G. W. Daugherty told newsmen, "I guess all of Howard County is here."

Here Mr. Truman singled out another Republican Congressman for target practice—Representative Forest A. Harness—but didn't name him. He appealed for the election of the Democratic nominee, John Walsh, "to take the place of the backward-looking Congressman who represents this district."

"We need somebody to go along with the clock, not try to turn it back," he said.

Former Governor Henry F. Schricker, running a close race with Hobart Creighton (R.) for the Governor's chair, rode with the President through Indiana, taking a bow with him at each stop.

Democratic congressional candidates were loaded aboard too. The President put in plugs for them at Hammond, North Judson, Logansport, Kokomo, Tipton and Noblesville.

Democratic congressional leaders aboard claim they will not only hold on to the two Indiana House seats they have, in the First and Eleventh Districts but pick up two seats in the Seventh and Eighth.

In the Seventh District, Representative Gerald W. Landis (R.), is opposed by World War veteran James Noland, who missed beating Landis by only 2600 votes in 1946. In the Eighth District, Representative Edward A. Mitchell is opposed by Winfield Denton, Evansville lawyer, another 1946 near-miss.

Mentions "Had-Enoughers"

Crowds running into the tens of thousands watched Truman parade through Indianapolis. En route to the Athletic Club, for a rest before his scheduled night speech, Mr. Truman stopped off at a State leaders' reception in a downtown movie theater.

In a short speech here, Mr. Truman again rode Republican legislators. He said the country two years ago elected "the kind of Congress the had-enough people wanted."

"And now we've 'had enough' of that kind of Congress," he said.

Later, in his War Memorial speech, Mr. Truman hit at "the medical lobby" and a "well organized campaign to discredit and confuse" his proposals for a National system of health insurance.

When he asked the Eightieth Congress to do something about it he said his only reply was: "Sorry. We can't do that. The medical lobby says it's un-American."

Human Rights Group Honors 3 for Service

Citations for "distinguished service in furtherance of civil rights" last night were presented to Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Ore.), Mrs. Norma E. Boyd, founder of the National Nonpartisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Society, and, in absentia, to Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.).

The presentations were made at a dinner meeting of the American Council on Human Rights at the Willard Hotel. The council is composed of six Greek letter college societies, four of which were founded at Howard University.

Morse told his listeners that "the solution of the civil rights problem is not to be found in any political party."

The Senator declared that only through the enlightenment of the individual citizen could the aims of civil rights adherents be achieved.

He praised, as more worthy of recognition than he, those who brought test cases into court in such matters as segregation in the public schools and the housing covenant fight.

A message from Representative Douglas read at the meeting said in part: "I feel strongly that until we have settled the problems of our minority groups here in America there is little hope of commanding the respect of smaller nations in the world and of maintaining our leadership position in world affairs."

The American Council on Human Rights maintains headquarters at 1130 6th st. nw. Among its aims are passage of a Fair Employment Practices Act; abolition of segregation in schools, the armed forces, public transportation and passage of an antipoll-tax bill. Mrs. Edna Over Gray is national president of the council.

Sen. Martin Says Democrats Present 'Disruption' Picture

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—United States Senator Edward Martin of Pennsylvania tonight charged the "whole Democratic picture is one of division, confusion and disruption."

On the other hand, he said "Governor Dewey offers us a constructive program of unity and good will based on the American plan of work, courage, sacrifice, tolerance and the love of God."

In an address prepared for a rally of Third and Fourth District Republicans in the Petersburg armory, the Pennsylvania Senator urged Virginians "to go forward to victory for America and the world by voting" for Dewey and Warren and a Congress that will "give them cooperation and support."

Martin asserted Truman "does not, in any manner whatsoever, represent the aims, objectives, ideals or principles of the once great Democratic Party of Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson."

"The present Democratic leadership," he said, "is followed only by the selfish, shattered remnant of the New Deal party. Its candidate Harry Truman, forced his nomination upon an unwilling and reluctant convention in Philadelphia."

President Truman, he charged, has "demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that he is not qualified to furnish competent leadership for his own party."

Martin took occasion to express his "high regard and esteem for the stalwart Americanism of a great Democratic statesman—U. S. Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia.

"No man in America has done more to warn the people of the dangers of a heavy debt, high taxes and unnecessary Government spending than Senator Byrd," Martin said.

'He is performing a nonpartisan patriotic service which we in Pennsylvania greatly appreciate."

Senate Filibuster to End If GOP Wins, Ives Says

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—If the Republicans retain control in the United States Senate, they will make it their first job next year to eliminate rules permitting filibusters, Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) predicts.

Ives told the New York Charter of the American Jewish Committee yesterday that the filibuster must be eliminated if antidiscrimination and civil rights legislation are to be enacted.

Barkley Outlines Farm-Labor Aims

Kansas City, Kans., Oct. 15 (AP).—Extension of social security benefits to farmers and repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law topped a farm-labor program outlined tonight by Senator Alben W. Barkley.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee enunciated his party's "basic" goals for farmers and working men in speeches at Kansas City, Kans., and St. Joseph, Mo.

Earlier in a speech at Columbia, Mo., he called upon Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, GOP presidential nominee, to state publicly his position on Federal aid to education.

The farm policy of the Republican Party, he declared, "would neither protect the gains of the last 16 years nor provide adequate growth in the future."

The Democratic program to meet the "basic needs" of farmers, Barkley said, is built around these provisions:

1. A long-term, adequate farm price support program based on parity.
2. Extended farm and crop insurance.
3. Extension of long-term, low-interest credit.
4. Continuation of the school lunch programs.
5. More family-type farms and less "corporation farming."
6. Assistance to farm laborers.
7. Recognition of farm cooperatives as "one of the most effective answers to farm problems."
8. Development of new uses for farm products.
9. Electrification of all rural homes.
10. Federal aid to education.
11. "Better rural housing" legislation.

In his labor speech here, Barkley said under Republican administrations the power of the Government "has been used to smash unions in conjunction with unrestrained intimidation and suppression by antilabor employers."

In addition to repealing the Taft-Hartley law, Barkley said, the Democrats will:

1. Boost the present minimum industrial wage from 40 cents to 75 cents an hour.
2. Increase old age and survivors' insurance benefits "by at least 50 per cent" and extend coverage to many not now covered.
3. Rebuild and expand the Labor Department.
4. Support the right of all for "equal opportunity of employment regardless of race, creed or color."
5. Curb inflation.
6. Promote maximum employment.

U.S. Must Combat Communism, Not Fear A-War, Kincaid Says

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 15. — America must "act vigorously" to combat world Communism and not be afraid of an atomic war, Admiral Thomas C. Kincaid said tonight.

Addressing the American Merchant Marine Conference and Propeller Club Convention, the eastern sea frontier commander said our rearmament program and "our new weapons" make it improbable that an aggressor will underestimate America's strength and intentions.

"Those who endlessly repeat that an atomic war would be the end of civilization are rendering disservice to the cause of peace," said the wartime chief of Southwest Pacific naval forces. "They needlessly arouse fear and hysteria which is unwarranted. There is no sound reason for fear among the citizens of a country which has at hand the great instrument of enormous technical power."

Peculiarly Vulnerable

Kincaid told the Nation's leading shipping men that the maritime industries are "a peculiarly vulnerable target of first priority" of "our Communist enemies." He called on them to fight this drive.

Earlier, the convention approved a resolution declaring that Communists have been responsible for the "constant disruption" of the maritime industry. It backed the stand of the West Coast employers in refusing to negotiate with the unions until their officials sign affidavits disavowing communism.

The conference also adopted a series of resolutions calling for increased Government aid for the merchant marine. Both subsidized lines—long at odds—got together on a legislative program, designed to stimulate shipbuilding and continue shipping companies operating "in the black."

Main Points of Program

The program calls for extension of construction subsidies for non-subsidized ship operators and grant of more favorable tax treatment of the latter. Liberalization of construction subsidies for the lines already entitled to such benefits also was asked. Lower interest rates on Government loans and more liberal trade-in allowance on old ships was proposed.

Strict enforcement of the requirement that half of ECA shipments be transported in American vessels was demanded, together with extension of this rule to imports of strategic materials. The conference went on record in opposition to restoration of the Japanese and German merchant fleets.

Another resolution called upon Congress to amend the Selective Service law to exempt active merchant seamen and those who served in hazardous waters during the war.

The conference expressed its "deep concern" over the "failure of the Government" to launch a long-range merchant shipbuilding program. It was approved after Samuel Schell of Washingtgon, vice president of the National Federation of American Shipping, informed the group that "such a program" was in the making and said he felt the resolution was "unduly critical" of the Maritime Commission.

Louis B. Pate, vice president of the Robin Line, was elected national president of the Propeller Club at the closing session.

Wildcat Strike Stops N. Y. Beer Deliveries

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A beer drought in populous New York City loomed closer today as police reported a complete stoppage of deliveries from six major breweries whose CIO drivers struck yesterday.

The stoppages, which idled some 2700 brewery workers, was called an "irresponsible, wildcat action"

'No Starving' Seen on Trip

This was reported last night by the Rev. Dr. James A. Magner, procurator of Catholic University, who recently returned from a European tour. Dr. Magner spoke before more than 400 persons at last night's opening lecture of the Charles Carroll Forum at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Magner said he observed no evidence of starvation in the principal cities of seven European countries he visited this summer.

While countries are struggling with communism, inflation and the black market, he said, the people of France, Belgium, Spain, Portugal and Switzerland appeared happy and prosperous. He said the food situation in England is "tight," but food is not scarce.

He attributed the British "down in the mouth" attitude to "social security claustrophobia" created by the Laborite government, to give social security to British right "up to their necks, so they can't move" without laws for their benefit."

At the conclusion of Father Magner's speech, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of the Washington Diocese, said he was certain that Dr. Magner did not intend to state or imply that there was "no starvation" in Europe. He said the European relief work of the Catholic Church must be continued at its present high level.

Independents Favor Dewey

with Premier Stalin at Potsdam in 1945.

But the focal point of Governor Dewey's barnstorming today was the candidacy of Senator Ball.

He was not being altogether unselfish in plugging for Ball's reelection. The Minnesota seat is one of four Republican seats which could be captured by Democrats this year—the others being in Oklahoma, Wyoming and West Virginia.

If these Senate seats should be lost, and if the Republicans failed to pick off a Democratic seat or two, Governor Dewey would find himself with a Senate the committees of which would be controlled by the opposition.

U. S. Senator Edward Thye, Ball's colleague, emphasized this today as he joined Governor Dewey in talking to crowds along the way.

"He may be needed to give the GOP control," Thye said. "It would be a pitiful thing if you had a Republican President and did not have a Republican Senate."

A poll being conducted by the Minneapolis Star and Tribune showed recently that Ball was running 12 percentage points behind his Democratic opponent, Hubert Humphrey, jr.

Several reasons are given here for Ball's present dilemma. Political reporters say the thing that hurt him worst was his advocacy of a labor law even stronger than the Taft-Hartley Act.

They say, too, that the fact that Ball employs Mrs. Ball as his secretary in Washington has caused some unfavorable comment.

Dissatisfaction among the farmers also is mentioned as a factor. The Democrats, it seems, have been making headway with their charges that the Republicans favor changes in the price-support program.

It was this that Governor Dewey was seeking to offset in his St. Paul speech tonight.

Senator Ball might have the 50-50 chance given Governor Dewey, if his opponent weren't named Hubert Humphrey.

Humphrey, now Mayor of Minneapolis, is regarded here as quite a fellow, politically speaking. He is attractive, has a record that appeals to the independents, and is a first-class orator, although some say he doesn't know when to stop talking.

Humphrey's strength lies primarily in the big industrial cities like St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth.

President Truman, who was here the other night, gave Humphrey a glowing indorsement, the while he described Ball as a liberal-gone-wrong and Governor Dewey as a "me too" candidate.

Governor Dewey, in his speech in the auditorium tonight, praised the undesired crowd for turning out in the rain. He recalled that it had rained, too, when Gov. Earl Warren, his running mate, was in Minnesota, and he said he was happy that the two of them had come to the State as "rainmakers."

The New Yorker got a whale of a cheer when he described Harold Stassen, his erstwhile opponent for his GOP nomination, as "one of the finest leaders of our time."

He outlined his views on various issues as follows:

Price support program—"I am whole-heartedly and unequivocally for it and don't let anybody tell you anything different. I believe in it because it will benefit the farmer. I believe it because it is for the good of all our people. It will be a major part of the program of your next national administration.

Soil conservation—"From your next national administration they (the farmers) will get less politics and more practical help in soil conservation—the help a grateful Nation owes them in the job of saving our land."

Rural electrification—"I am happy to report to you—and to the farmers of America—that it was the present Republican Congress which gave the REA its greatest lift. This present Republican Congress voted by far the largest amount ever provided by any Congress to speed electricity to our farms—800 million dollars.

Foreign Policy—"There will be no appeasement of dictators. That policy leads only to slavery or to war. The best way for us to get along with the Soviet leaders is to deal with them as strong equals and by so doing to restore their respect for us. We shall deal with the Soviet as with all other nations—in a spirit of friendship and fairness. But we will make it perfectly plain that now or hereafter we do not intend to be bullied or bluffed."

Warren Terms GOP Lone Leader

Eugene, Oreg., Oct. 15 (AP).—Winding up an exhaustive 31-day coast-to-coast campaign, GOP vice presidential nominee Earl Warren asserted tonight the Republican Party alone was in a position to lead the Nation after next January.

It is the "only party," he declared, that can meet the specifications for "real leadership" with unified ranks and with the "ability for coming to grips" with current national and world problems.

The candidate will go back Saturday to Sacramento. After a weekend of rest, however, he will enplane Monday for Miami and the American Legion convention.

On October 23 he will open an intensive campaign in his home State of California which will carry him up to election day, November 2.

Airlifts Combined Under American

'Monstrous'

Briton Assails Red Slavery Before U. N.

Paris, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Britain charged today that Russia has enslaved millions of her citizens in a "monstrous system of oppression . . . without parallel in history."

British Foreign Undersecretary Christopher Mayhew accused Soviet authorities of maintaining "a vast class of slaves . . . as domestic animals only for what they produce."

Mayhew denounced the "slave system" in a speech to the United Nations Social Committee, rejecting a Soviet charge that "millions" of people had died of hunger and exhaustion in Britain's colonies.

He declared that the Soviet Union had lost the moral right to make such charges when "a million of its citizens died in a famine which was a result of state policy."

The British official said that the minimum estimate of the number of slave workers in Russia, based on official Soviet publications, was 1,800,000.

He said a Russian refugee—"Colonel Tokaev, who recently sought refuge in our country, estimates that there are 13 million slave workers."

He quoted a book compiled by Russian Deputy Foreign Minister and U. N. Delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky and a statement by Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov as proof that Russian highway systems, canals and bridges are built by forced labor.

The slaves work from 4 a. m. to 6 p. m., Mayhew said. He charged that many die of hunger and exhaustion and are buried in mass graves.

Berlin, Oct. 15 (AP).—The United States and Britain, combined their airlift task forces under American command today while Russian guns rumbled in war practice within earshot of Berlin.

U. S. Air Force headquarters at Wiesbaden announced the signing of an agreement to put all airlift operations under the command of Maj. Gen. William A. Tunner who flew war supplies over the Himalayan "hump" from Burma to China.

The effort to feed Berlin henceforth will be known as the "combined airlift task force." The agreement was signed by Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, U. S. Air Force commander in Europe, and Air Marshal Sir Arthur P. M. Saunders, commander in chief of British air forces in Germany.

Tunner, who commands American airlift planes, will have operational but not administrative control of the British airlift. He will have headquarters in Wiesbaden. His British deputy, Air Commodore J. W. F. Merer, will have a base at Buckeberg in the British zone.

The U. S. Air Force said the merger was aimed at more efficient use of planes.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, commented that the team-up was merely history repeating itself. He said "we learned to work so closely with the British during the war."

A Birtish officer at Gatow Airport on the western outskirts of Berlin said he believed the Russian gunfire came from tanks engaging in maneuvers and was 3 miles away.

A senior American Air Force officer declared the firing definitely was not from antiaircraft guns. He identified it as ground artillery fire.

British and American planes taking off from Gatow passed directly over where the shells were bursting less than 200 feet from the ground, an official British announcement said. The firing lasted more than half an hour.

[The United States, British and French military governors today set November 1 as the date for beginning of a previously announced more than 15 per cent increase in Berlin food rations. The increase will be from 1730 to 2000 calories per day. The United Press quoted the announcement as saying the increase "would help sustain the population in its resistance to inhumane and illegal" Soviet pressure.]

Dulles Attends Clay's Press Conference

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's foreign affairs adviser, attended a press conference held by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in chief, today.

Dulles said he came here for personal consultation with Clay "whose knowledge of German affairs and judgment I value most highly."

Dulles intends to visit Vienna Saturday and return Sunday to Paris, where he is a delegate to the United Nations Assembly.

acceded to Bramuglia's request for more information, Vishinsky refused and said the Soviet will not be tricked into abandoning its position.

Bramuglia replied sharply:

"One cannot impute devious motives to six countries which have wished to cooperate in solving this problem. No such motives exist. They are neither in our minds nor in our spirits. One cannot impute such motives in the Security Council or in any United Nations body. Any tendency of doubledealing is excluded by definition from the United Nations and its organs."

Vishinsky left immediately after adjournment. Bramuglia waited to talk with the other neutrals, who plan to meet again Saturday still hoping to find a solution.

Elsewhere in the U. N.:

1. Britain charged in the Assembly's economic committee that the economy of eastern Europe is being "deliberately harnessed to serve the economic interests of the Soviet Union." British Delegate Glenvil Hall said Russia banned eastern European cooperation in the European Recovery Program, forced unequal trade agreements on its satellites, placed Soviet economists and technicians in key posts, and formed great industrial combines under Soviet control.

2. In a disarmament subcommittee, United States Delegate Frederick H. Osborne opposed a Soviet resolution calling on the big powers to slash their arms by one third this year. Osborne said it was an effrontery for Russia to introduce a disarmament resolution in the name of "a dictatorship which Stalin himself said rested on violence." He called on Russia to say whether she would cease her own expanionist moves by nullifying fifth columns in other countries and whether she would accept international arms inspections.

3. The Assembly's trusteeship committee rejected a Soviet resolution which tended to force colonial powers to supply political information about their dependent territories.

Air Force Fills Weather Job

years ago, he came to America in 1935 as a lecturer for the Navy and California Institute of Technology.

In 1939, he became chief of the Meteorological Department of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He served with the Norwegian Air Force in England during World War II, and has subsequently held key positions with the International Meteorological Organization.

He and his wife apparently have weathered the real estate problem here in a breeze.

"We've found a very nice home and expect to move in this week," he announced proudly.

Detroiters Like Escort Service; All But Police

Detroit, Oct. 15 (AP).—Police think Detroiters are taking the commissioner's new "escort service" too seriously—and they don't think it's funny.

To combat sex crimes, Police Commissioner Harry S. Toy announced that women had only to phone a station and they would get a police escort home at night.

"Our first call was from a woman who wanted a scout car to drive her home," said one desk sergeant. "She had only a few blocks to go. Besides, it was broad daylight. And she was calling from a bar."

Another sergeant said he turned down two men who phoned and asked for policewomen as escorts.

"They wanted blondes," he said disgustedly.

Russia Fires Meat, Dairy Minister

Moscow, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Soviet Union has fired its minister of the meat and dairy industry, apparently because he failed to fill his production quota.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said today the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet has appointed Nikolai Ivanovich Smirnov to replace V. V. Vorobev in the post. The announcement came after the central statistical administration reported that Vorobev fell 9 per cent below his quota.

The statistical administration said Russia's industrial production as a whole now is 26 per cent higher than in 1940, peak year of Soviet accomplishment, and that the 1948 grain crop has reached the 1940 level.

"During the nine months of 1948 the total production of Soviet industry exceeded the average level of prewar 1940 by 14 per cent and in September by 26 per cent," the industrial report said.

The bureau said the government's goals for the first nine months were exceeded by 6 per cent and the goals for the third quarter by 7 per cent.

The statistical bureau's comparison of production in the third quarter of 1948 with the same quarter of 1947 showed pig iron up 15 per cent, steel 25 per cent, railway rails 19 per cent, coal 14 per cent, petroleum 9 per cent, electric power 15 per cent, locomotives 28 per cent, trucks 43 per cent, automobiles 92 per cent, roller bearings 24 per cent, tractors 94 per cent, synthetic rubber 99 per cent.

Army Rules No Lampshade Trial for Ilse

By The Associated Press

The Army said yesterday it has no authority to prosecute Germans for offenses committed against other Germans, because such offenses are not war crimes. Hence, it said it could not try Ilse Koch for making lampshades of prisoners' skins.

The Army was asked by a reporter for comment on a statement Thursday by Leon Alexander of Chicago, former prosecutor in the United States war crimes group, who said that a "complete judicial error" prevented proof of mass atrocities against the woman.

In reply, an official Army spokesman said:

"It was the Army's position that crimes by Germans against Germans, particularly those committed prior to the outbreak of war, were not international crimes and therefore were not war crimes."

Alexander, now an attorney in Paris, contended that the Koch woman's guilt for mass atrocities could not be established because the majority of her crimes were committed "during the period which the American Army . . . refused to include in its trial.

War Would Involve Italy, Sforza Says

Rome, Oct. 15 (AP).—Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza said tonight that Italy's "geographic position and strategic importance rendered it vain for me to hope for neutrality in any future war."

He told the Senate, however, that he does not expect war.

Speaking in debate on the ministry's budget, Sforza repeated previous denials that Italy had or sought secret military pacts. But he said isolation would not save the country from war.

"The only practical solution for Europe," Sforza said, "is the federative one."

2500 Unionists To Boost Red Line in France

Paris, Oct. 15 (NYHT).—Twenty-five hundred pro-Communist trade union leaders dispersed to all parts of France tonight, pledged to agitate for Communist participation in the French government, destruction of the Marshall Plan and cooperation with the Soviet Union for "a policy of peace."

The 2500 men and women were delegates to the congress of the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT). Representing 16,000 local trade unions affiliated with the CGT and a total membership of 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 workers, the delegates adopted this pro-Communist program this afternoon.

The occasion was the closed session of the five-day congress to establish policy for the year ahead. There were only three dissenting votes.

At the same time, the CGT gave evidence that it was prepared to intensify strike activity next week. The latest CGT directive ordered security teams guarding against gas and flooding in the strike-bound coal mines to quit their posts for 24 hours Monday.

The non-Communist trade unions also were bringing pressure on the government. Workers' Strength, the Christian Workers Confederation, and Foremen's Union delegates on the national price committee decided to boycott the committee's activities on account of the government's insistence of raising the price of coal 18.5 per cent to 3500 francs a ton.

There was an improvement in the overall strike picture, with the return to work of all the Lorraine metal workers with reported bonuses from 2000 to 10,000 francs.

The government drive against black marketers resulted in further arrests. There are reports the cabinet is prepared to demand the death penalty in extreme cases.

Court Holds Hitler, Eva Legally Dead

Munich, Germany, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Adolph Hitler and Eva Braun, whom he married a few days before the collapse of the Third Reich, were declared legally dead by a German Denazification Court today.

The tribunal, ruled that the founder of "National Socialism" was a "major offender" and Eva was a "Nazi profiteer." But, said the court, "there can be no doubt both are dead."

As a result the state confiscated the couple's remaining property, adding about $60,000 to its treasury. This included Hitler's former luxurious estate at Obersalzberg, now a pile of rubble valued at about $2700, and a house in Munich worth about $45,000.

If alive, Hitler would have been sentenced to 10 years imprisonment. Eva would have drawn between six and eight years.

Today's proceedings in a dingy office in the ministry of denazification were mere formality.

The sole witness was Adolf Wiedmann, an obscure photographer's assistant who testified that Eva bought her Munich home from Heinrich Hoffman, Hitler photographer. It was in Hoffman's shop that Hitler and Eva first met.

Italy Blames Cominform For Strikes

Rome, Italy, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Government leaders charged today that strikes are being spread in Italy on orders of the Communist Information Bureau and announced plans to use police in breaking a scheduled 48-hour walkout of local and suburban transport workers.

Officials of the interior and transport ministries held an emergency conference to map plans for the strike Monday and Tuesday. They announced that police will guarantee that government-run buses provide adequate service.

In Parliament, government leaders charged that labor agitation in Italy is following the same pattern as Communist-inspired walkouts in France. They said the strikes were being spread on direct orders from Cominform headquarters in Bucharest, Romania.

Marshall's Intervention In French Strike Denied

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP). — Informed American sources said today that charges Secretary of State George C. Marshall had intervened in the French coal strike were "ridiculous."

The charge was made yesterday by Arthur Horner, Communist secretary general of the British Mine Workers Union. He said Marshall recently told Will Lawther, president of the British union, to attack the nation-wide French stoppage.

Marshall to Make Greek Aid Survey

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall will leave soon for Athens to check on American aid to Greece, a United States spokesman said tonight.

The date for Marshall's departure was withheld. However, it appears certain he will visit Athens before the Greek question comes before the United Nations General Assembly.

Greece has demanded further American aid to maintain an army large enough to beat guerilla forces operating along the Yugoslav and Albanian border. Funds for these must be asked at the next session of Congress in January.

Polk Murder Solved, Athens Report Says

Athens, Greece, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—American newspapermen and high Greek officials will be flown to Salonika Sunday for a government announcement which is expected to say that the murder of George Polk, American radio correspondent, has been solved.

Constantine Rentis, Minister of Public Order, will accompany the newspapermen to Salonika, where Polk's body was found floating in Salonika Bay May 16, the Ministry of Information announced.

Greek newspapers were filled today with sensational reports of the crime's solution. Suspects were named freely. Official sources refused to confirm any of the newspaper reports, but, in off-the-record talks, they blamed Communists for the killing.

Gregory Staktopoulos, a Salonika newspaperman with alleged Communist connections, and his mother, Mrs. Anna Staktopoulos, both have been in solitary confinement at Salonika since August 14, but no charges have been placed against them.

Police said Staktopoulos was aboard a small boat in Salonika Harbor May 9, when Polk, chief Near East correspondent for the Columbia Broadcasting System, is believed to have been killed. They said ink, similar to that on the envelope containing Polk's Army postoffice card, was found in Mrs. Staktopoulos' home.

Salonika police received Polk's APO card in the mail May 15. The next day his body was found in Salonika Bay. He had been shot through the back of the head and bound with 30 feet of rope. He had been in the water about a week. He was last seen leaving his hotel May 10. He was believed attempting to contact the forces of Greek guerilla leader Gen. Markos Vafiades for an interview.

Toronto, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A. R. Mosher was reelected president of the Canadian Congress of Labor today in stormy session of the annual convention in which he and C. S. Jackson of the United Electrical Workers Union staged a battle over communism. He defeated Jackson, 564 to 150.

Draft Objector Fails to Change Mind

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—An 18-year-old actor, after thinking it over in jail several days, today went through with his plan to plead guilty to failure to register for the draft.

Perkoff

Federal Judge Murray Hulbert set October 29 for the sentencing of Stuart Zane Perkoff, the actor, who is son of a St. Louis tavern owner.

On Monday Judge Hulbert granted a request of Perkoff's attorney that the actor be locked up so he could consider the implications of his opposition to conscription.

"The experience of a few days in a jail cell might change his mind and he's agreed to it," the attorney said.

But today Perkoff told the judge he understood the charge against him fully and that his desire to plead guilty was unchanged.

The actor surrendered to the FBI September 20, explaining he would not register for the draft because he was a conscientious objector.

Cooperative For Whom?

A first-class racket has been spreading in Washington under the euphemistic description of the "cooperative" apartment. The beneficiaries of many of these ventures, it appears, are not so much the tenants as the former managements and their agents. In theory, the "cooperatives" offer tenants an opportunity to "buy" the apartments they now occupy and thus insure a home for the future. In practice, what this means is that the tenant must plunk out a substantial down payment and then in addition meet monthly amortization and maintenance charges that sometimes amount to more than his former rent. Moreover, if the tenant refuses to buy, he is told that his apartment will be sold out from under him and that he will be faced with eviction.

What we are referring to is not the apartments formerly owned by the Government in which tenants themselves have banded together to buy the property. While the ouster of nonbuyers from such developments can be quite ruthless, there at least the tenants are represented. Where the racket enters is in the "cooperatives" formed by managements or promoters, officered in advance, and then presented to tenants as a fait accompli. Such devices offer a convenient way of getting around the Rent Control Act. For example, if an apartment owner has deferred his maintenance, by forming a "cooperative" he can pass the maintenance on to tenants. If the tenant does not accede, his apartment technically can be sold and eviction proceedings started on the ground that there is now a new owner of the apartment.

The legal status of these pressure devices is as yet confused, though in Washington the Municipal Court of Appeals has upheld the right of a new owner to oust the former apartment holder. Certainly, however, the growth of this type of "cooperative"—and throughout the country it is spreading from luxury apartments to tenements—makes a mockery of the protection supposedly guaranteed tenants under rent control. If the higher courts do not act to slap down such maneuvers, Congress itself ought to recognize the threat when rent control comes up for reconsideration.

First ERP Dividend

The arrival at a New York pier of 1000 tons of high grade British rubber as the first "reverse Marshall Plan" dividend calls attention to one of the heretofore little known aspects of the ERP. More rubber is on the way from Britain and other commodities will be coming along under the same provisions of the program. They are all in the category of scarce strategic materials which the Munitions Board is stockpiling in this country. Since this part of the program, in its tangible form, will become more evident in the near future a better understanding of its details is needed.

The Economic Cooperation Act of 1948 required each recipient country, as a condition of receiving aid, to conclude an agreement with the United States covering the use of assistance received. Two provisions specified in the act bear on acquisition of scarce materials. One called for the establishment in each country of what are called "counterpart funds." These are special accounts into which the recipient country deposits amounts of its own currency equivalent to the dollar value of the commodities and services it receives under ECA grants. Ninety-five per cent of these counterpart funds are to be used, with prior approval of the ECA, within the country concerned for such things as currency stabilization, expanding productive facilities and developing resources. The other 5 per cent, Congress specified in the ECA Appropriation Act, must be available to the United States to cover its expenditures in the recipient country, including local ECA administrative costs and the purchase of scarce raw materials for stockpiling. The rubber shipment comes under this 5 per cent provision.

The second general provision applicable to strategic materials has not yet come into actual operation. It provides that the recipient countries will make available for purchase by the United States at market prices "fair shares" of strategic materials in their possession but in which we are short or potentially short. This is a method of assuring the United States future long-term supplies of these materials beyond the time when the Marshall Plan ceases to operate, presumably in 1952.

These provisions and their tangible implementation are evidences that the Marshall Plan is not simply a handout. It is a carefully thought-out program of assistance which serves not only the general interests of the United States in world economic recovery, but also our needs in the narrower field of scarce materials. And it does so in such a way as to encourage, even require, the nations we are helping to put their own resources and energies as fully as possible into the common effort.

Recovery Vs. Tyranny

The tension that continues to exist in Berlin ought not to obscure the ferment that is at work in western Germany and in most other parts of western Europe. The democratic forces are not standing still while the Russians blockade the rail, highway and water approaches to the former German capital. From many sources come reports of renewed activity and increased strength that tend to offset the merely strategic advantage the Kremlin has gained by its starvation technique. Europe is regaining its equilibrium, and each step in that direction minimizes the danger that the continent may be overrun by Red tyranny.

In western Germany impressive gains have been made since this year's crops have been harvested and the currency reform took effect. Once more a great majority of the people have enough to eat, although their diet is lacking in variety and is deficient in meat and fats. Production has notably increased not only because workers have more to eat but also because the money in which they are paid once more has relatively stable value. Goods that were formerly hoarded are once again on the market. While Bizonia is still suffering from critical shortages of raw materials, steel production has more than doubled since 1946 and is sharply ahead of last year and of the 1948 goal. Vitality is beginning to flow back into the economic structure, and that is the best possible protection against the onward march of aggressive communism.

In the broader area of western Europe the story is similar. ECA Director Hoffman is back from the continent with reports of sharp increases in the output of fertilizer, electric power, petroleum products and steel. A vast number of bridges have been rebuilt. A foundation has been laid for a "freer clearance of currencies and the continued removal of barriers to the movement of people and goods." Perhaps most important of all, the people have found new hope and new determination in the efforts of their governments to work together and cooperate with the United States in a recovery movement of continental scope.

These heartening reports stand out in sharp contrast to what is happening in eastern Germany and probably in the satellite countries and in Russia itself. The Soviet occupation zone has gotten an increase of German policemen instead of production. The police maintain an oppressive check upon the doings of every family, precisely as Hitler did. The Socialist Unity Party, which the Soviet has been building up as an instrument to do its bidding, is reported to be losing strength because of its support of the Berlin blockade and the failure of the "people's plants" in the Russian zone to fulfill their promises. The standard of living is sliding downward, and discontent is said to be mounting accordingly. The Kremlin's answer has been purges in the Socialist Unity Party and tighter control over the hapless German population.

We doubt that propaganda can effectively dispel the differences between these Western and Eastern postwar policies. The West is straining itself to hasten recovery and promote the welfare of all the people in an atmosphere of freedom. The East is sullenly resorting to oppression and economic chaos. General Clay now says that the Russians even made it impossible for the Western powers to buy food in Poland and Czechoslovakia for hungry Berliners. The Kremlin is following policies that tend to be self-defeating among any people that yearn for freedom or even self-respect or decency in human relations. The seeds of weakness in those policies may count for much more in the end than the temporary strength of the Russians' position astride the rails and highways from Bizonia to Berlin.

In this respect at least time is working on our side. Of course, the provisioning of Berlin by the airlift is a critical problem, and will become more so during the winter months. But so long as the Big Three stand firm and press their demands for lifting of the blockade, any worsening of conditions in Berlin will intensify the difficulties Russia is already experiencing in eastern Germany. In the end it is by no means impossible that economic recovery in the West may overcome tyranny in the East without bloodshed. That seems to be the strongest hope for settlement of the present impasse without war. It is a hope worthy of the best efforts that every democratic nation can give.

Glass Houses

The technical question of drafting a clause in the proposed Declaration of Human Rights in a committee of the U. N. Tuesday gave the Soviet representative an excuse to toss a brickbat at the United States. The practice of segregating Negro and white passengers in railway cars, he said, would be punished as a crime in the Soviet Union. Applying the maxim that people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones, the Cuban delegate pointed out that the Soviets discriminate in an even more vigorous way against anyone in Russia who does not conform to the official line.

In this instance we doubt the advisability of taking refuge behind the old adage. If the Russians can't criticize us for our shortcomings, then by the same rule non-Russians are debarred from calling attention to their faults. And just as we intend to keep our right of throwing brickbats, we think they should have the same right. In fact, a stone propelled with such ill grace by another sinner hurts as much as one thrown by a saint—and perhaps a little more. For there is no question that the practice of racial segregation is a failure on our part to live according to our own precepts, and it is not pleasant to have our faults exploited by a strictly antidemocratic regime.

For it is not the mention but the exploitation that hurts us most. The pain may not be as acute for us, but the damage is all the greater among those we would persuade of the rightness of our cause. At least three quarters of the people who inhabit this globe do not have white skins. This fact may not seem of any particular significance to the question of where a Negro has to sit in a railway car in some portions of the United States. But it is of very great import. Not until we are immune to criticism on the score of racial discrimination will the appeal of democracy carry the weight it should with the rest of the world.

Educated Elite

Ten months ago the President's Commission on Higher Education issued its report under the title "Higher Education for American Democracy." Among other things it recommended a 170 per cent increase in enrollment in the various graduate and professional schools in order to meet a predicted need for more doctors, nurses, teachers, and the like. President Conant of Harvard has now issued a "report" of his own entitled "Education in a Divided World." It covers more ground than the commission's study and parallels it in many respects. But on the question of graduate and professional education President Conant takes explicit issue with the commission.

Instead of encouraging more young men and women to take four-year college courses and go on to professional training, Dr. Conant would shunt them off the educational track at the end of high school. By then, he asserts, a student's educational capacities and vocational talents can be ascertained and his further education or lack of it determined accordingly. Only those destined for the professions should have four years of college as a preparation for graduate specialization.

President Conant rests his argument most heavily on the test of ability. But he brings in also a consideration that seems to us both inconsistent and damaging. If we educate more doctors, lawyers, engineers, and teachers than our economy can support, there will be a remainder who do not get jobs. These "frustrated individuals," he says, will be potential leaders of antidemocratic movements of the right or the left.

The inconsistency lies in the fact that Dr. Conant has already provided, in his scheme of selective education, for all students at the elementary level to be thoroughly indoctrinated in the ideals and practices of democracy. If this is successful, and if only a high school education is enough for the masses to preserve democracy, then the leaders whom Dr. Conant fears will have no followers. By the same token, unless higher education weans them away from principles they imbibed in grade and high school—which we greatly doubt—their leadership cannot very well be antidemocratic. If we recall correctly, the foremost leaders of the Nazi and the Fascist movements were less rather than more educated. And for our money the men in charge in the Kremlin don't show a very broad or high level of understanding either. Whatever the decision as to broadening educational opportunities may be, we do not think that college education should be limited because of any fear that it might be dangerous to democracy.

Another Fugitive

The case of Mr. Dimitri Karagheozov, the Bulgarian consul general at Ankara, who disappeared nearly five weeks ago, only to turn up, gay and debonaire, in Washington, is another illustration of the difficulty that the satellite countries must have in conducting any kind of diplomatic activity. It seems likely that the embassies and consulates of these countries in every capital outside the iron curtain are full of persons who are watching for opportunities to do precisely what Mr. Karagheozov has done. They must live in dread, as Mr. Karagheozov said he did before his escape, of orders to return to their homelands.

The satellite countries have not had time to train diplomatic services comprised exclusively of Communists. Thus they are obliged either to rely upon professionals inherited from the prewar regimes or to staff the embassies and consulates with inexperienced persons. Even Soviet Russia after 31 years has not been able to build up a foreign service which can be trusted out of sight of the M.V.D. The more intelligent and less zealous type of Communist diplomats suffer a good deal of ideological damage after a little exposure to a bourgeois atmosphere, as the cases of Alexander Barmine and others testify; whereas the less intelligent and more zealous type is very likely to make serious blunders, as in the recent case of Consul General Yakob Lomakin.

Naturally, Mr. Karagheozov did not explain in detail how it was he managed to elude whoever had been delegated to watch him and to reach the friend who secreted him for several days and then smuggled him aboard a Turkish ship. From his account, however, it appears that the escape was merely improvised. Nevertheless, there is now said to be in every important city a sort of anti-Communist underground organized for the purpose of aiding such escapes and of shielding the fugitives from possible vengeance. Thus the conspiratorial methods adopted by communism in the days of the Tsarist repression, and continued everywhere outside Russia as a means of advancing the revolution, have perforce been adopted by its adversaries. There is some danger that the politics of the whole world may presently be infected by them.

Vulnerable B-36

The 300,000-pound, 300 mile-an-hour, 3000-mile radius, three million dollar B-36 is indeed a mighty weapon, and perhaps well worth the $300,000 it must have cost the Air Force to try to sell it to the dubious aviation writers of America.

But what good would this monster be if it could easily be destroyed by a $30,000 Russian jet suicide plane, produceable easily in large numbers for the sole purpose of ramming our unmaneuverable heavy bombers?

Technically the problem is very simple. A short-range jet suicide-rammer, needing no landing gear, heavy armament, reserve fuel, or complicated instruments, can be made so light, small and fast that it would be almost impossible for B-36 or B-50 gunners to sight it and shoot it down in time. It would also be very cheap and simple to produce in quantity. Its engine would not have to be expensively built for long life. Its pilot would need know only the simplest single-plane tactics, and thus could be quickly and cheaply trained.

The best way to commit national suicide is to rely on only one type of weapon. It lets the enemy concentrate on simplified, drastic defenses bound to stop that weapon. The more types of weapons we have, and the more surprise and maneuver we can bring into play in their use, the more we confuse an enemy and force him to divert and disperse his effort. The more effective the B-36 is, and particularly the more effective it may appear to the Russians, the more we need such balancing weapons of other types.

Cheers For Georgetown

Dr. Ober, in his letter of October 9, complained how the cheer "Hoya, saka" of Georgetown had the same grating effect on his classical ear as the filing of a hack saw. Moreover, he called the combination of the Greek word hoios with the Latin word saxum a "forced marriage" and seemed to castigate the originators of this "etymological miscegenation."

Permit me to caution Dr. Ober against being too censorious of the talented classicists who cheered in the football stadia of yesteryear. For even his fellow blood-letters are wont to foster this "illicit" partnership; e. g. ecotopic (Greek) pregnancy (Latin).

For I conceive my fellow alumi of early Georgetown as men who had an ear for novelty, sense, rhythm and point, even if they wore their hair and their sideburns longer in those days. I believe they held that in the clear failure of one language to elicit from its repertory an exact equivalent of the idea to be conveyed, it became not only proper but imperative (on the principle of Cestui apres in case of trusts) to fall back on an approximate word or idea of kindred import, the interchange in vocabulary showing, at time, even a balance in favor of the substitute, as happens in the ordinary course of barter on the markets of the world.

They abhorred the clumsy servility of adhering to the letter of etymology, while allowing the spirit of tone and quality of utterance to evaporate. They too, like Dr. Ober, delighted in chewing the cud of classic fancies, and shunned verbal distortions of otherwise approved and substantial idioms; yet spontaneity of song is the quintessence of original utterance and I believe our long-haired elder sons of alma mater delighted in curious felicity of expression, even as did Horace in his callida juncture; and amused themselves in investing with new and varied juxta positions, universally recognized forms of the ancient classics gleaned from their text books.

Military Aid And ECA

The October 15 issue of your highly valued paper has an editorial and a news article which interest me very greatly. The editorial and the article are related.

The editorial is entitled "Rising Price of Peace." With this I find myself in very close agreement. I had not meant to imply that the ECA under Mr. Hoffman's management was, itself, presently being diverted directly into rearmament.

This, however, is not all there is to it. The fears and purposes of the recipients of that aid in Europe are being almost irresistibly drawn in the direction of rearmament. This drift will be increasingly difficult, in my judgment, to restrain.

On the domestic side the article on the first page of yesterday morning's issue, entitled "8-Billion Foreign Aid Bill Foreseen," emphasizes the point so far as our own Government and our own citizens are concerned. It lumps together economic recovery, relief, and military aid. That is just the danger. It is going to be particularly difficult to prevent lumping these separate but not unrelated items together in any program for China which the Republican Party decides to undertake.

The consideration of military aid is a purely military problem administratively unrelated to ECA and is essential. My suggestions may properly be classed as preventive warfare on the ideological front.

Teaching "Americanism"

The Washington Post is to be commended for alerting the parents and taxpayers of Montgomery County to a very real civic menace. I refer to the October 9 item captioned "Goucher College Head Cautions on Teaching 'Americanism'," describing the Maryland State Teachers Association meeting in Baltimore, attended by county school teachers en masse with the very questionable approval of the county's remote-control board of education.

The group penalized the parents and taxpayers an amount equal to two days' pay of all county teachers by releasing all teachers from school work for two days so they could sit in and absorb un-American indoctrination propaganda at Goucher College. With about 800 teachers to pay for doing nothing for two days, county taxpayers lost $31,104.

This penalty against county taxpayers is bad enough, in itself, but the actual facts of the meeting indicate much more drastic and menacing results than even the inexcusable waste of taxpayers' funds. The Associated Press states that Dr. Otto F. Kraushaar, president of Goucher College, told county teachers: "Americanism, in its narrow sense, is associated with exclusiveness, interference with civil liberties, racial antagonism and bigotry and intolerance of every sort." This pseudo-educator also cautioned county teachers against teaching straight "Americanism."

I am confident that the majority of people in Montgomery County are patriotic citizens who would not stand for this subversive, un-American situation if they had a chance to voice their sentiments, and I am sure that, once they are informed, they will join with me in protesting this waste of taxpayers' money.

"Research Chief"

I was quite amused by the reference to Dr. Bush in your October 8 editorial as "a man of somewhat austere personality." Those of us who had the privilege of working closely with him during and after the war might describe him as forthright, incisive, quick, warm-hearted, human, salty, and even, occasionally, profane, but never "austere."

Not so humorous was your conclusion that domination "by a few large universities" would result from the acceptance of Dr. Bush's stand for control of the National Science Foundation by scientists. Though Dr. Bush probably would be the first to agree that there is plenty of room for debate on the question of whether the director of the foundation should be selected by the President or by the scientists making up the governing board of the foundation, many people, even among those whom you call "students of sound public policy," agree with him that it is in the public interest to put the foundation's work in the hands of the scientists and out of the political sphere to the maximum extent possible.

And while a main objective should be to have the foundation's research work done by the most competent individuals in the country under the sponsorship of those scientists on the board, there are many who disagree with your conclusion that domination "by a few large universities" would result.

Even less amusing are the insinuations in your statement that Dr. Bush's "conservatism has been resented by some of the working scientists." It is true that some people, including your editorial writers and others who spend more or less time than Dr. Bush in the laboratory and workshop, disagreed violently with Dr. Bush when during the Atomic Energy Act debate he advised against completely divorcing the military from the work of the Atomic Energy Commission, and disagreed with him again when during the National Science Foundation debate he gave his opinion that it was not in the public interest for the Government to attempt to take full title to all inventions and patents that arise out of work financed in whole or in part by the Government.

Rather than give a gentle, but still ill-mannered, "heave-ho" to a man who has served the Nation so competently and so faithfully through eight critical years—nearly always on a "without compensation" basis — it seems that it would have been more appropriate for your usually fair newspaper to have stressed Dr. Bush's tremendous accomplishments in our behalf, and then deplored the fact that so few Americans have the ability and desire to serve the Government for so long in the face of the undeserved verbal brickbats to which even the best public servants are exposed.

JOHN T. CONNOR.

Summit, N. J.

Editor's Note: The Washington Post cast no disparagement of Dr. Bush's service. Certainly our reference to "well-earned" tributes hardly qualifies as a brickbat any more than does our editorial statement that "More, perhaps, than any other man, Dr. Bush has epitomized the tremendous efforts which resulted in the perfection of radar, the atomic bomb and the many other scientific developments that helped win the war." But there is no purpose in publishing an editorial unless it also can attempt honest all-around appraisal of men in public life. It is for this reason that we commented on Dr. Bush's views and conservatism which are beyond dispute an irritant to many scientists.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Dewey's Restraint

ABOARD the Dewey Campaign Train.—In the long light of history the current political campaign may have a quite different look than it now has to us who are so close to it. Candidate Dewey's contemporaries—and this goes especially for the 70 newspaper critics traveling with him—are inclined to be irritated by his high-level appeal for unity, his failure to be specific on specific issues.

The last is a charge to which the Dewey team is acutely sensitive. And, believe me, they are sensitive on this train and instantly aware of criticism—even though it may seem that they are gently and even smugly coasting down to victory.

In particular on the core of foreign policy the Dewey managers resent the charge that they are too vague and too general. A well-known radio commentator delivered a rather sharp attack on Dewey's Salt Lake City foreign-policy speech. The commentator quoted wise-cracking Oscar Levant as saying he had always wondered how a man would sound who was saying nothing. And now, said the radio oracle, we know.

The commentator felt that Dewey should have specifically declared for the rearming by the United States of the armies of western Europe. Failure to do so, in his view, was evasive and cowardly.

But the Dewey managers make what seems to me a most important rebuttal. They point out, first, how perilously close is the margin between war and peace in the savage East-West contest. Dewey has said privately that he believes only two votes in the Politburo in Moscow stand in the way of immediate war.

THIS BEING so, say the skillful men in car No. 2, who are fashioning Dewey's speeches, a clarion call for immediate rearmament by the candidate almost certain to be next President of the United States might well have a disastrous effect. It could convince the masters of the Soviet Union that there was no hope for any kind of settlement and that therefore war while the Russian armies have the preponderant advantage in Europe was the only choice.

With this in mind—and the men around Dewey are deeply aware of what an unrelieved disaster for all concerned another war would be—Dewey's words on foreign policy are chosen with the most painstaking care. In his Oklahoma City speech, for example, he said:

"We are not trying to tell other people how they should live. We are not even trying to tell them what kind of government they should have. In our dealings with other nations we shall be fair, consistent, patient and strong. We shall have a foreign policy that has for its single goal the establishment of peace in the world . . ."

While that may be perfectly obvious, it nevertheless seems to me important that it should be said. This is not appeasement in any sense of that abused word. It is self-restraint and foresight, and Dewey deserves full marks for it.

IN THE long light of history I believe he will get greater credit for his restraint on the issue of foreign policy than is accorded him today. If peace can somehow be preserved, then in the longer perspective the magnitude of the present crisis will be apparent and Dewey's contribution will be clear.

The way is wide open to exploit the fumbles of the Truman Administration. The Vinson-to-Moscow proposal is only the most glaring instance. Consider the kind of campaign that Senator Robert A. Taft would be conducting at this point if he had become the Republican nominee. The bipartisan foreign policy would be mincemeat and the Soviet radio would be echoing night after night the Republican attacks.

Incidentally, Republicans of the Taft variety are almost as unhappy over the Dewey unity campaign as the newspapermen who scratch through the Dewey speeches in search of a headline. They would, of course, like to see an old-fashioned hell-and-brimstone attack on the wicked Democrats and the arch fiend Truman. But they will not get more than an occasional small dose of that kind of adrenalin from the team that has plotted this campaign with hour-to-hour precision. Now and then the contrasts are downright funny.

At Kansas City, Dewey sat on the platform alongside Missouri's Senator James Kem, who introduced him with the traditional "and the next President of the United." Kem is opposed to just about everything that Dewey has said he stands for.

If the Kems have their way—and they certainly mean to make a try in the next Congress—they will gallop back to good old normalcy leaving Dewey no choice but to go along or commit political suicide. The Kems in the Republican Party are suspicious that after the warm appeal for unity, after the victory, will come some surprises they will not like. I think their suspicions are well founded.

A-Powered Plane Is 'Thought Out'

Worry Needless

Ray Danger Of A-Bomb Minimized

Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, director of atomic defense for the Navy, last night expressed the belief that people are worrying too much about the hazards of radioactivity in the event of atomic bombing.

Parsons said in a radio broadcast (Mutual) that he believes "the hazards (of radioactivity) have generally been overemphasized."

He said an aerial blast of the kind used at Hiroshima and Nagasaki "would not leave an aftermath of dangerous radioactivity."

If these bombs had exploded close to the ground, there would have been a crater like that left on the desert at Alamogordo, New Mexico, where the first A-bomb was tested.

He said this would have been "hazardous for some time" but the crater would have been a few hundred yards in diameter.

Parsons said that out of the eight A-bombs fired so far, only the underwater blast at Bikini left "appreciable amounts of radioactive deposits."

He said the Bikini underwater burst was "much more serious" than the other bomb explosions because the spray and some of the fog contained radioactive residue which was deposited on the target ships at Bikini.

But, he said, "it is by no means certain that this sample from one burst represents even what would be typical in the case of a bomb fired in a harbor in the close vicinity of a city."

Parsons said the air burst over the ships at Bikini "left no radioactive residue on the ships."

Parsons said that the "great prominence" given the hazards of radioactivity since Hiroshima "has been useful in familiarizing people with the fact that there is such a thing as radioactivity."

"I believe that in the long run it will be best to treat radioactivity as something of great interest and possible hazards, but not something which is insidious and inevitably dangerous," he said.

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—An Oak Ridge engineer says the theory of an atom-driven airplane is 99 per cent perfected.

David M. Poole reported to the Baltimore Society of Automotive Engineers that the job is now up to the slide rule men with their drawing boards and working models.

The scientists have thought out a way to tap the power of a mobile atomic pile, he said. Now the engineers must make the idea work. They must design and build the engine, the plane, the controls and the protection for pilots and crew.

Poole is a member of the "nuclear energy for the propulsion of aircraft" project at Oak Ridge and head of its thermodynamics (heat problems) group.

Nearly all the airplane manufacturers in the country have specialists at Oak Ridge working at the puzzle. He represents Fairchild Aircraft.

The big thing about an atom-powered plane, Poole said, is that in theory at least it could go on flying forever.

"The time has come," he said, "when we can no longer afford not to have atomic aircraft."

He reasoned:

Superbombers developed since the war must carry so much fuel they can't go very fast—by jet-propelled standards. Jet planes which do better than 700 miles an hour can't carry enough fuel to stay up very long.

But a weight unit of atomic power is as potent as two million weight units of gasoline.

Poole reported the scientists have made up their minds how to make most of this power: Use the heat generated in an atomic pile.

What kind of a heat engine? Rocket-thrust? No, said Poole. Tried and abandoned. Steam turbine? Turbo-jet? Ram jet? All crossed off, said Poole.

"A nuclear rocket," he said.

Exactly what is that? Secret!

The next problem is to protect the crew from the deadly atomic rays. Operators at Oak Ridge work behind heavy concrete.

Poole said the scientists have a much lighter material now. They have cut down the radiation leak to about the amount you get off the luminous dial of a wrist watch.

"The shield still will be heavy," he reported, "but conventional planes can handle it."

Poole chalk-talked for two hours about this to the engineers. Then they started popping questions and almost forgot to go home.

4-Nation Plot On Nicaragua Is Charged

Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 15 (AP).—Gen. Anastasio Somoza, Nicaragua's Minister of War, today declared Costa Rica and "Communist" Cuba, Guatemala and Venezuela are conniving to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

Somoza said he wished to denounce to the world "an evil plot" against the peace of Central America. He said the plot also was directed against El Salvador and Honduras.

The revolutionary movement, Somoza said, is getting "effective aid" from such "governments as Prio Socarras' in Cuba, Arevalo in Guatemala, Romulo Betancourt in Venezuela and Figueres in Costa Rica."

The President of Cuba is Carlos Prio Socarras, just inaugurated; Juan Arevalo is President of Guatemala, and Jose Figueres is head of the government in Costa Rica. Although Somoza's statement refers to Romulo Betancourt, the President of Venezuela is Romulo Gallegos.

Somoza said it was inconceivable that within inter-American unity such activities against continental peace could go on.

He added that Octavo Arana Jimenez, a former lieutenant in Somoza's national guard, "had been working as an instructor of the legion of bandits, with his salary paid by the government of Costa Rica." The legion is composed of exiles whose avowed aim is to overthrow "Central American dictators."

Somoza said Arana now is in jail. He said he had made detailed statements about his activities. Somoza said Arana had handed over a list of persons in several countries who were working with the revolutionaries.

Panama Reported Willing to Reverse Stand on Bases

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Enrique Jimenez, President of Panama until 14 days ago, said today the new government is willing to renew talks with the United States for defense of the canal.

Jimenez, leaving tonight for Europe, said in an interview he felt sure the regime of his successor, Domingo Diaz, would consider anew the rejected bases agreement.

The National Assembly, while Jimenez was still President, rejected an agreement to grant the bases, and the United States evacuated them promptly.

AEC to Spur West's Output Of Uranium

Important moves to boost the production of uranium, the raw material of atomic energy, in Western States were announced last night by the Atomic Energy Commission.

It disclosed that it is negotiating with the Vanadium Corp. of America to buy uranium from two ore treatment plants which are to be brought into operation by the corporation next year.

As one result, the commission foresaw a stimulus to prospecting and mining of the vitally important ores in the West.

At present much of the uranium used in the American atomic energy program comes from the Belgian Congo and Canada.

One of the ore treatment plants will be built by the Vanadium Corp. in the White Canyon district of San Juan County in southern Utah.

The commission said it is also arranging to lease to the corporation a commission-owned vanadium-uranium mill at Durango, Colo.

The Durango plant, which has been idle for some time, is to be rehabilitated by the corporation at an estimated cost of more than $200,000. Operations there are expected to start in late 1949.

Paraguay To Renew Ties With Spain

Paris, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Paraguay notified the United Nations today that it intends to re-establish normal diplomatic relations with Spain.

The U. N. had voted to withhold normal diplomatic relations with Spain as evidence of its disapproval of the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Argentina never abided by the boycott resolution but sent a new ambassador to Spain. Peru recently re-established full relations. Paraguayan Foreign Minister Domingo Montanaro said the principle of nonintervention in the affairs of other countries was a basic concept of inter-American and Paraguayan policy.

The U. N. Security Council found that the Spanish regime did not constitute a threat to world peace, he declared.

Reds Filter Into S. Korea, Dr. Rhee Says

By Miles W. Vaughn

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Communist agents from Russian-dominated north Korea are infiltrating into south Korea with instructions to foment disorder, President Syngman Rhee said today.

South Korea must constantly combat plots hatched behind the north Korea blockade, Dr. Rhee said. Korean Communists, he said in an interview, are determined to extend their "Red dictatorship" to American-backed south Korea.

The President said frankly that his Government relies upon the United States for economic and military support against these plots.

Dr. Rhee plans to go to Tokyo soon to consult with Gen. Douglas MacArthur on the Communist threat to India and other countries of the Far East.

Rhee said he believed the movements of Chinese and Korean Communists were directed by a single plan made in Moscow. He also believed these movements are related to recent Communist outbreaks in Malaya, Indonesia and Borma.

Commenting on police action against the Korea Press news agency, and against the Chinese Central News Avenay in Korea and a number of Seoul newspapers, the President said that while he is not opposed to criticism of the government in editorials, he demands complete accuracy and impartiality in news reports.

The constitution of Korea, he added, guarantees freedom of the press and prohibits agitation designed to overthrow the government.

N. Korea Is Puppet Of Russia, U. S. Says

By The Associated Press

A new Russian-backed Communist regime in North Korea was described by the State Department last night as a Soviet puppet which took power through bogus elections.

The State Department put out a detailed 124-page review of developments and noted that since V-J Day the United States has provided South Korea with more than 300 million dollars in aid.

Poland, North Korea Establish Relations

London, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow reported tonight that Poland has announced establishment of diplomatic relations with the "Korean Peoples Democratic Republic" in Russian-occupied northern Korea.

Radio Moscow announced that Terentishtkov, formerly commander of Russian troops in north Korea, had been appointed Soviet Ambassador to Korea.

Royall to Review Cadets At West Point Today

Royall also will attend the Army-Harvard football game and a reception at the superintendent's quarters after the game.

Europe Visit Cleared Issue, Hoffman Says

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman said yesterday that his hurried trip to Europe this week had cleared up "misunderstandings" about the dismantling of German factories for reparations.

From what he told a crowded press conference, it was clear that Hoffman had failed to persuade the British and French to stop all dismantling, pending a new study of which plants should be kept in Germany.

Hoffman seemed satisfied, however, that by flying to Europe with Secretary Marshall in President Truman's plane—on what he called "probably the highest-level hitchhike in history"—be achieved some worth-while results.

3-Point Agreement

He first read a formal statement saying that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France had agreed with him on three points:

1. The British and French will give "fullest cooperation" to the industrialists' committee, headed by George M. Humphrey of Cleveland, appointed to advise Hoffman on which plants should be kept in Germany and which should be moved elsewhere to help European recovery.

2. Until the Humphrey committee makes up its mind, "any dismantling will be of such a character that it will not prevent the eventual retention in Germany of such plants."

3. "It was of extreme importance from the standpoint of European recovery that this reparations problem be disposed of once and for all in the shortest possible space of time."

Security Angle Admitted

In his formal statement, and in answers to questions, Hoffman emphasized that the plants now on the reparations list were declared to be surplus to Germany's needs. The plants involved in the present discussions, he said, were a comparatively small number—"neither scores nor thousands."

He acknowledged that security questions were involved in the disposal or retention of the factories and that other countries were concerned in the final decisions. Asked how he intended to deal with the countries now getting reparations from Germany, Hoffman said: "I'll make my recommendations to the Secretary of State and let him handle it."

As an example of the problem facing him, Hoffman said it might be desirable to ship the machinery from a German factory to Italy, where there is a surplus of labor. Italy, however, is a former enemy country which does not belong to the inter-allied reparations agency and is not on the list of those entitled to reparations.

He said one of the plants on the removal list made cuckoo clocks, and he thought such a plant should be kept in Germany. When a reporter asked him what this plant had made during the war, he conceded that it might have made fuses for military purposes.

"Diversion" Denied

Hoffman strongly disputed the charge made by his friend, Senator Ralph E. Flanders of Vermont, that European recovery funds were being diverted to military purposes.

(A letter from Flanders, explaining that he never meant to give such an impression about ECA funds, is published on the editorial page today.)

Hoffman said he knew of no transaction financed by ECA which was intended for military uses. Of course, he added, ECA money might free some other money that a European country could use to buy armaments.

"I see no evidence," he said, "that the countries of Europe are over-spending on defense. There has to be a balance between what you spend for security and what you spend for your own recovery and prosperity."

Hoffman expressed the belief that Europe would need less ECA money in the coming fiscal year than this year, in view of Europe's progress toward recovery.

One of the basic assumptions of the European Recovery Program was that the amount of help sought from the United States would decrease in each successive year until 1952, when it would dwindle to zero.

Danger Seen In 'Creeping' Of Secrecy

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15 (AP).—Atomic Energy Commissioner W. W. Waymack today deplored "the tendency for secrecy in Government to creep" into new fields.

At the same time he declared that while there is no alternative to searching loyalty checks on all atomic workers, the scope of the security program "is not without possible dangers."

Waymack put his views into an address prepared for the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of Ohio State University.

Stresses Need of Balance

Stressing what he called the need to find a balance between relying on secrecy and relying on atomic progress for national security, the commissioner added:

"It is not extremely difficult to get agreement in principle today among intelligent men . . . That, for anything but the shortest run, the main reliance must be on progress. Yet it is altogether possible . . . for the reality to be greater and greater reliance . . . on precisely the opposite practice.

"The reasons for this danger," Waymack went on, "are various:

"One is the tendency for secrecy in Government to creep, to cover ever more and more. 'Security' is a wonderful cloak.

Tempting as Retreat

"Another is the security-through-secrecy idea; it is so easy to grasp, it is so tempting as a retreat from complexity.

"Another is the fear psychosis . . . to which timid public servants can react by 'playing it safe' always . . .

"Underlying all these reasons and others there is the want of public edcuation as to what this problem is."

"If the Nation in effect comes to rely on secrecy above progress for security," Waymack declared, "it means that fewer and fewer will know enough to participate in progress . . ."

Waymack said "fifth columnism" is a reality that cannot be dodged.

Broad as All Outdoors

While the Army was in charge, he said, some 600,000 people worked at one time or another on the A-bomb project and the commission itself now has some 60,000 workers "subject to very thorough background investigation."

"The net of it is," Waymack continued, "that for the first time in our history we have in the files of Government confidential dossiers about a significant number of our people, a number that grows daily. The personal histories on file have to do not with loyalty alone, but also character and associations, and this can be as broad as all outdoors . . .

"This process, at least as to scale, is new in our experience. I can see no possible alternative. It has to be. But it is not without possible dangers."

Dictator Plot Laid to N. Y. CIO Rightists

Officers of the Greater New York CIO Council last night accused right-wing unionists in the New York area of conducting "a conspiracy to foster company unionism and dictate to all CIO members."

The officers, regarded in union circles as left-wingers, made their allegation as a special CIO investigating committee wound up its inquiry into recent council policy decisions on major trade union and political issues.

Seven CIO unions in the New York area have accused the council and its officers of following a pro-Communist line on all policy decisions.

The complaining unions asked CIO President Philip Murray to revoke the council's charter, thus removing it as a branch of the CIO. Instead, Murray named a special committee of three right-wing union presidents to look into the charges.

L. S. Buckmaster, chairman of the committee, said the final hearing "went off very quietly" in contrast to Thursday's sessions, which saw shouting, table-pounding and a brief fist-fight.

Saul Mills, secretary-treasurer of the New York council, said none of the charges against the council "has been substantiated in any way."

15 German Newsmen To Visit Here

Fifteen German newspapermen and editors attending a seminar at the American Press Institute of Columbia University will arrive from New York tonight for a two-day visit in Washington.

The four Washington newspaper—The Washington Post, the Star, the Daily News and the Times-Herald will handle arrangements for the visit designed to acquaint the men with the Washington press.

The visitors will tour the city Sunday and attend a cocktail party that afternoon given by Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, whose husband, the late Senator Hitchcock, was an Omaha publisher.

Monday at 9:30 a. m. they are scheduled to attend a press conference with Howard Bruce, a deputy administrator of the Economic Cooperation Administration.

This will be followed by a luncheon at the National Press Club with Washington correspondents and a press conference at 3 p. m. with Assistant Secretary of the Army Tracy Voorhees.

On Monday night the Washington newspapers will be host to the men at a dinner at the Statler Hotel.

The seminar for German publishers and editors is provided in a Rockefeller Foundation grant and its purpose is to show foreign newsmen how the democratic press operates.

Reds Capture Blazing City Of Chinhsien

Nanking, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Chinese defense ministry announced late today the Communists had captured Chin Hsien at noon yesterday.

The city in southern Manchuria had been the key supply point for isolated Mukden, 125 miles to the northeast.

Shortly before the announcement, reliable sources said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had flown to Peiping because of Chinhsien's critical situation.

Press accounts said the city was aflame from more than 1000 artillery shells poured in from the encircling Red lines.

Minimum Wage Raised To 85c in Hat Industry

Secretary of Labor Tobin yesterday boosted the minimum wage for Government contract work in the hat and cap industry from 67½ to 85 cents an hour.

Tobin also raised the industry's Government contract wage rate for helpers from 40 to 65 cents and established a new rate for learners at 67½ cents. The changes are effective November 16.

The Labor Department said these rates already are being paid generally and the industry raised no objection at a hearing in June to make them the minimums for Government contract work.

10 Plumbing Firms Named In Trust Suit

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—Ten of the Nation's largest plumbing manufacturers were accused in three antitrust suits brought by the Federal Government today in connection with the United States investigation into the high cost of housing.

The concerns were charged with arranging tie-in sales of brass fittings as a prerequisite to the purchase of bathtubs, sinks, lavatories and other bathtub equipment, thereby driving independent dealers in fittings out of business.

W. Wallace Kirkpatrick, special assistant to Attorney General Tom Clark, said the action was taken in United States District Court here because of "the tremendous expansion of housing in the eastern Pennsylvania area."

One suit names the Kohler Co. of Kohler, Wis.

The second, names the Briggs Manufacturing Co., of Detroit, and three of its subsidiaries, Abington Potteries, Inc., Abington, Ill.; John Douglas Co., Cincinnati, and Republic Brass Co., Cleveland.

The third is against Max Gerber, operating as Gerber Enterprises of Chicago, and four affiliated corporations—Globe Valve Corp., of Delphi, Ind.; Kokomo Sanitary Pottery Corp., Kokomo, Ind.; Woodbridge Sanitary Pottery Corp., Woodbridge, N. J., and Berber Industries, Inc., Delphi, Ind.

The White House announced yesterday that Preston Delano has been given a recess appointment for another term as Comptroller of the Currency. Delano has served two five-year terms.

School Bond Referendum Set for Nov. 2

A referendum on a proposed $4,750,000 bond issue for Arlington school improvements was formally set for November 2 in an order signed yesterday by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

The action, described by court officials as a "mere formality," confirmed what most Arlingtonians already knew—that the referendum would be held along with the coming general election.

A petition requesting the referendum was submitted to Judge McCarthy two weeks ago. Issuance of the court order was delayed, however, since law requires that the election must be held from 15 to 20 days of the court order. An earlier signing would have precluded the November 2 referendum date.

A public vote on the improvements program was advocated by more than 3300 Arlington residents, who signed petitions calling for the referendum after a vigorous campaign by the county's board of education and numerous civic groups.

Navy Discards Gray Uniforms Worn in Wartime

The Navy officially tossed its wartime gray uniforms out the porthole yesterday and said it's khaki in summer and blue for winter hereafter.

Officers can wear out their old grays, at sea only, for one more year, and reserves can wear 'em on short training duty and drills.

The optional gray uniform was introduced by Admiral Ernest J. King, wartime Navy boss, but was greatly disliked in the Pacific Fleet and almost never worn.

Dress uniforms will be white for summer, blue for winter, as at present. But the idea of wearing gold stripes that went only halfway around the sleeve is dropped, the Navy said. The expensive stripes must go the full distance now.

Red Cross Lays Plans For Hospital Yuletide

Plans for bringing Christmas joy into the lives of thousands of patients in military and United States civilian hospitals in this area were drawn yesterday at a special meeting of the District Red Cross Camp and Hospital Committee.

Representatives of some 20 organizations, including service clubs and religious groups, conferred at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Jacobs Named Envoy To Czechoslovakia

Joseph E. Jacobs of South Carolina, a career diplomat, was given a recess appointment yesterday as Ambassador to Czechoslovakia.

Jacobs, a native of Johnston, S. C., who has been in the foreign service since 1915, will succeed Laurence Steinhardt, recently named Ambassador to Canada.

Jacobs is now serving in Paris as an adviser to the American Delegation to the United Nations Assembly.

Financial backing for the new church is furnished by the board of home missions and the Middle Atlantic Conference of the denomination, in addition to the local congregation.

Phone Union Makes New Wage Charges

At CIO Parley

Carey Calls Labor Law 'Sovietizing'

The Taft-Hartley Act yesterday was branded by James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer "a move to Sovietize American trade unions."

Carey spoke before members of the Utility Workers Union (CIO) at the opening of a three-day convention at the Washington Hotel.

Declaring that "personal observation" has convinced him Russian trade unions are "miserable instruments" of the Soviet government, Carey asserted that the Taft-Hartley Act has the same aims, made manifest by "rigidly restricting" the right of workers "to withdraw their services from an enterprise."

Sharply criticizing the labor, price control and housing record of the Eightieth Congress, the speaker asserted "we are out to change the attitude of these Congressmen or change the Congress."

The Taft-Hartley Act earlier came in for castigation at the hands of John W. Gibson, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

"If you like the Taft-Hartley Act, just stay home on election day and rub your hands with glee," Gibson told the delegates.

"If you like the rich man's tax relief bill, just stay home and let him determine who will run the country."

1-Shot Insulin Is Developed

the globin insulin now used reaches its peak in eight hours and runs out in 18 to 20 hours, requiring as many as four extra "booster" shots a day for the severely afflicted.

Tested this summer on a special group of 200 diabetic children (and diabetes is most severe in children, she said) at camps operated by the Joselin-Baker Clinic, NPH-50 proved more effective with one daily injection than four daily injections of regular insulin, Dr. White reported. In a smaller, pregnancy group, patients who needed five daily injections of regular insulin found they needed only one injection of the new, she added.

The new insulin was described as a modification of protamine insulin first developed by Hagerdorn in Denmark in 1935 and modified with zinc before it was marketed in the United States in 1937. This was further changed about five years ago to the so-called regular insulin of today.

NPH is Neutral Protamine Hagerdorn and the 50 is a quantitative designation, Dr. White explained.

Dr. White also revealed that the American Diabetes Association has set aside the week of December 6-12 as Diabetes Week for promotion of plans for local mass surveys to ferret out the estimated 1,000,000 persons in United States who do not know they have diabetes.

In this regard, she said, the United States Public Health Service has devised a simple blood test that determines within five minutes a dangerous excess of blood sugar. The test, she said, is only useful as a screening test, and even then should be used in conjunction with a urinalysis because of its "margin of error."

Washington phone union officials charged yesterday that the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. has raised salaries of hundreds of supervisory employes by upwards of $5 a week while failing to meet "rank and file" workers' demands.

The accusation, which drew a "no comment" response from management, was hurled into tense union-management relations—stemming from abrupt curtailment of negotiations at midnight Thursday.

Maryland and Virginia telephone workers also were without wage boosts. However, some 23,000 CIO long lines employes, including several hundred in Metropolitan Washington, tentatively accepted increases ranging up to $6 weekly.

Raises to at Least 300

Mrs. Mary Gannon, president of Division 50, Communications Workers of America (Ind.), which covers some 3000 area operators, asserted that the company has just granted wage hikes starting at $5 a week to at least 300 "management people."

She said the bulk of Washington "hello" girls would have gotten $2 weekly wage rises under the final company offer—submitted to the union. Some 180 would have received $3 more weekly and 800 or 900 a $4 wage rise, she declared. Craft employes would have got increases ranging from $1 to $6 weekly.

Meanwhile, an anticipated imminent settlement in Virginia wage negotiations failed to materialize. Union bargaining representatives "tentatively" accepted a $1 to $6 company offer, subject to approval by the international CWA executive board.

The board rejected the proposal at a meeting yesterday.

9.3 Cents Raise Agreed On

An agreement between the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in New York and CIO negotiators set the stage for settling a dispute involving 25,000 long-lines workers throughout the country.

Subject to approval of the CIO union's executive board, which meets Monday, the settlement offers the workers in 41 States an average of 9.3 cents an hour more as compared with their most recent demand of $6 a week more.

In Chicago, a Federal mediator announced the suppression of a threat which would have crippled telephone service in Southern Illinois and Northwestern Indiana. The settlement will give more than 11,000 members of the CIO Communications Workers of America raises from $1 to $4 a week. Six thousand are long-distance operators in Chicago.

A three-week series of "spot" walkouts of telephone workers in Michigan ended in Detroit as union leaders pledged a four-day truce at the request of Gov. Kim Sigler.

Gilbert Bowman, 56, 817 3d st. ne. suffered a possible skull fracture when he collided with a car as he stepped off a streetcar loading platform at 7th and G sts. nw. yesterday afternoon.

Bowman was treated at Emergency Hospital, then transferred to Gallinger Hospital, where his condition was reported as fair. Police listed the driver as William H. Harris, 27, 1419 Chapin st. nw.

were voluntarily grounded pending the hearing. However some have since been modified and returned to service.

Mrs. Herbert Smith, 22 South Pershing dr., Arlington, at whose home Ryder roomed, said the official had been suffering from a severe headache for a week prior to leaving for Winona. She said he had been "working day and night" and recently expressed melancholy over the death of his adopted daughter.

Cracks Found in Wing, CAB Man Testifies

Winona, Minn., Oct. 15 (AP).—A Civil Aeronautics Board specialist testified today that fatigue cracks were found in a section of the right wing of a Northwest Airlines plane that crashed near Winona, August 29, killing 37 persons.

Sydney Berman, chief of the technical section of the Civil Aeronautics Board, made the statement at a CAB hearing.

Similar cracks were found, he testified, in another airplane of the same make that followed the crashed plane through the storm. The second ship, also a Martin 2-0-2, landed safely in Minneapolis.

Carl G. Magnussen, superintendent of the line maintenance for Northwest Airlines, testified that airworthiness of the airplanes was not affected by a list of items about which pilots had complained.

John Runger, CAB investigator, said yesterday that pilots and crew members had repeatedly complained about mechanical and maintenance difficulties during the time the Martin 2-0-2 ships were in operation.

Radio Strike Threatened By Writers

New York, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A radio script writers' strike which would affect top comedy, variety, dramatic and quiz shows was threatened by the Radio Writers Guild today.

The men who diagram the laughs for such stars as Fred Allen and Bob Hope, and the tears for the "soap operas," have voted overwhelmingly in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles to silence their typewriters, Roy Langham, the guild's national executive secretary, announced.

The strike date has not been set, he said, but it may come any time after approval Wednesday by the Council of the Authors League of America of which the Radio Writers Guild is a branch.

The strike vote grew out a deadlocked dispute over a contract with the major advertising agencies which handle most of the network radio shows.

Both Langham and Leonard T. Bush, chairman of a committee representing the advertising agencies, agreed the dispute hinged on the agencies' condition that the guild should be certified as a proper bargaining agent by the National Labor Relations Board.

Society Awaits Status Ruling

The board of directors of the Society for Crippled Children met in special session yesterday to consider the organization's status—but decided it's an unknown quantity.

The local society has been threatened with expulsion by the national body as the outgrowth of an internal row centering around Mrs. Jewell Gaffney, the local society's executive director.

On May 11, the parent body informed the District society that unless reorganization was accomplished within 60 days, the local group would be suspended. On August 7, a "reorganization" report was submitted to the national body.

According to a prepared statement issued after a two-hour board meeting yesterday, the national organization has not yet indicated acceptance or rejection of the report.

Said Dan Piver, a local attorney and board member:

"We just don't know where we are right now."

Several board directors resigned as a result of the internal row. Yesterday eight were present at the meeting, held at the society headquarters, 1767 Massachusetts ave. nw.

A Moving Story

House Still Two Blocks From Site

As evening shadows last night enveloped the 4800 block of Fairmont ave., Bethesda, time was running short for a dwelling which had painfully inched its way along the paved road.

Racing, but slowly, against time was the 1½-story bungalow of Thomas W. Perry, fuel dealer, which a Gaithersburg housemover has been nudging along from its original site, 7754 Wisconsin ave., for two weeks, toward its new site, three blocks distant, 196 Cordell ave.

Faced with today's 89 a. m. deadline to finish the job, the mover, Basil R. Frazier, said Monday would be the earliest possible estimated time of arrival. The bungalow still has two blocks to go.

Meanwhile, Brooke Johns, president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, indicated possible "leniency" for the slow-motion moving project.

"If he keeps it on the move without causing a neighborhood nuisance, and if his intentions are good," Johns said, "I think we should be lenient with him."

This morning's deadline was imposed Tuesday upon recommendation of Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter, who said he feared the abode might dwell in Bethesda streets all winter, if it didn't get a move on, but fast. Sauter could not be reached for comment last night.

Mover Frazier said he would have a crew of seven men on the job at 8 a. m., fortified with wood sliding ways, soap, grease and elbow grease as well as a 2-ton truck and winch.

Hillandale Firemen's Fair

B. & O. to Build New Bridge At Rockcrest

A new bridge over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks at Rockcrest, Md., was promised yesterday by the railroad, Montgomery County officials disclosed.

County Engineer Blanton S. Barnett said, B. & O. representatives and county officials reached an agreement whereby the railroad would build a new bridge at Edmonston dr. and the county would build required approaches.

The decision climaxes year-long negotiations for the new span and a campaign by residents of Rockcrest since the B. & O. condemned a wooden bridge at Agnew dr. on June 18, closing it to traffic.

Since the bridge closed, Rockcrest residents have been forced to use Viers Mill rd., riding about 1 mile out of their way to get to Rockville pike.

The new bridge will provide a direct outlet to the Rockville pike. Barnett said construction is slated to begin soon after the first of the year on the 26-foot wide bridge, with a 4-foot sidewalk.

Plans will be prepared by the B. & O. engineers. Cost of the project is not yet known.

Dr. Harold Kochum, president of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, will preach a sermon for the Communion service concluding the convention at 11 a. m. at Grace Lutheran Church, 16th and Varnum sts. nw.

One on the Aisle—

'Red Shoes' Flaw Is Frayed Story

By Richard L. Coe

"THE RED SHOES," which last night set the National on its unpredictable course as a two-a-day movie house, boasts the most imaginative ballet the screen has yet shown. It is, however, hampered by an all too familiar plot that belies its pretentions that it is completely different from anything you've ever seen before.

Its scenes of the ballet world and its people are often compellingly real. It boasts a delightfully refreshing screen character in, of all people, Leonide Massine, who artlessly mimes the distinct personality that he is and dances as well in the film's longest ballet, the charming 14 minutes which give the picture its title.

With Robert Helpmann, Britain's most popular young ballet figure, two lovely dancers, Moira Shearer and Ludmilla Tcherina, and members of Europe's Monte Carlo ballet, the brooding, electric world of the dance is effectively captured. The tensions which link these artists in their set-apart world, their sense of isolation from other mortals and their demanding individualities are ably suggested.

For all that, the film is overlong, the triangle aspect of the story is mercilessly exploited and the Technicolor, apart from the ballet sequences when it is most beguiling, gives the players a distractingly made-up air.

Effective Background

The film was made in Britain and on the French Riviera by J. Arthur Rank's Archers group, headed by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, who wrote, produced and directed it. The Monte Carlo settings are surpassingly lovely and the shots of Covent Garden, with the fruit sellers hawking their wares by London's old opera house, are the real thing. Endless care has been lavished on detail, which makes it all the more unfortunate that the dancing sequences are limited in favor of story development.

The story concerns Miss Shearer (and a lovely thing she is, too) as a wealthy London girl with ballet aspirations. She wins a minor role in the company of a demanding, discerning impresario, played by Anton Walbrook.

When the prima ballerina marries, the impresario is enraged, fires her and trains Miss Shearer for her roles. The latter becomes a enormous success but follows the romantic trail of her predecessor. Her husband is a young composer the impresario has been promoting, but in her marriage she misses her dancing. Sensing this, the impresario makes her choose between dancing and marriage; she chooses suicide.

This story attempts to parallel the Hans Christian Andersen fairy tale of "The Red Shoes," whose wearer cannot tear them from her feet and so dances herself to death. When the tale is danced as the film's principal ballet, it is imaginative and beautiful; when it becomes the counterpoint for the major plot, it is absurd and pretentious.

Fresher Stories Available

For this is the same old Svengali plot you've seen in scores of musical films whose writers have had neither the wit nor the courage to present the art for what it is. Once more an art has been introduced as film material almost apologetically. I am not saying that the medium should go all out for arty vaporings as does the Dupont's "Dreams That Money Can Buy." I am saying that if we're to have a ballet film, let's have a ballet film and not cut shots of "Swan Lake," "Giselle" or what have you to reiterate patent situations.

Surely, too, the consecration to the art, which is the theme of the picture, could just as well have been illustrated by stories of the many marriages which exist inside the profession. Only last season, for example, a famous ballerina was appearing on the Constitution Hall platform a week after her husband was dancing on the National stage in the chorus of "Carousel." Yes, there are plenty of dramatic stories about the ballet's people without leafing back to Du Maurier.

The production, as I've said, is strikingly beautiful in its moments of pure ballet and in its visits to the incomparable Mediterranean. Moira Shearer is indeed a find, a graceful, titian-topped beauty. And Massine should make more films. The orchestra has been directed by Sir Thomas Beecham and Brian Easdale has composed the score.

IN BRIEF: Tonight is the finale for "Gay Time" at Constitution Hall . . . The hillbilly show is being withdrawn for an East Coast road trip, but it'll be back with Grandpa Jones and the rest . . . At a new home, however, for the DAR apparently finds, albeit belatedly, that even $750 rental per night isn't enough to salve its cultural conscience . . . Guest star for the last 27 weeks, during which over 70,000 paid admission, will be ballad singer Dave Denney . . . This morning at 10 is the hour for the Mount Vernon Players' "Star Dust" tryouts at 900 Massachusetts ave. . . . Birthday greetings to Capital Life, the hardy litttle guide book which is entering its third year.

"THE RED SHOES." Eagle-Lion release of a J. Arthur Rank film written, produced and directed by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger with additional dialogue by Keith Winter. Jack Cardiff, Director of Photography. Music composed and arranged by Brian Easdale. The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham. "Red Shoes" ballet by Robert Helpmann, the role of the Shoemaker created by Leonide Massine. At the National.

'Julia' Doesn't Do Her Justice, However

'Mother' Greer Allowed a Laugh

IT IS OFTEN forgotten that before Greer Garson became regent of Hollywood's ladylike matrons, she was an accomplished comedienne on the London stage. Smart, light comedy was her special forte, although our typecasting habits insist that this attractive lady must always be presented as a faithful wife, a patient mother, with the gentle smile covering the anxious heart.

Metro now presents the lady with her comic touch more in evidence than usual in "Julia Misbehaves," at the Palace. The film is amusing, particularly when it allows Miss Garson's wry sophistication into the affair. I find the comedy welcome, for it at least gives a hint of Miss Garson's finesse.

The unfortunate thing about "Julia Misbehaves" is that it is by no means as light and airy as it might have been. The story stems from one of the most amusing books of the decade, Margaret Sharpe's "The Nutmeg Tree," a performance that lady has never since equaled. Julia is a full-blown gal of 40 whose theatrical background, she fears, is not equal to the family she briefly married into.

The wit Miss Sharp squiffied into her story has baffled adapters before Scenarists William Ludwig, Harry Ruskin, Gina Kaus and Monckton Hoffe took over. "The Nutmeg Tree" was basic of a Brock Pemberton stage production which starred the amusing Gladys George, "Lady in Waiting," and while its week at the National was good fun, there's no denying, as the Pemberton books will sadly show, the venture didn't come off. Nor did it come off so well as Miss Sharp's "Cluny Brown" of two seasons ago.

In adapting the film to the movies, the problems have been tougher, despite the potential flow of the medium. Not only have Julia's fleshly philosophizings had to be raised to the moral tone deemed suitable for the masses, but the old debbil of a consecrated screen personality has had to be placated.

For, as I say, Miss Garson is the wife-mother supreme of her studio and, no matter how publicity-worthy a shift in her position may seem, the proprieties must be taken into account. Not only must Julia's amusing background be cleaned up a bit, but she must be made to seem again and again the anguished mother. Her faithful public must glimpse once again the mother-love motif, the tear-welled eyes and a husband, estranged maybe, but still a husband, and who for a husband but Walter Pidgeon?

These genuflexions to the presumed necessities get in the way of the quintet's screen play. The neat Sharp plot has to be distorted.

Comparatively speaking, though, "Julia Misbehaves" stacks up well enough among the year's laugh efforts. Pidgeon, always likable, is his ingratiating self, and such gilt-edged performers as Mary Boland, Lucille Watson, Peter Lawford, Elizabeth Taylor, Cesar Romero and Nigel Bruce have their amusing moments. But "The Nutmeg Tree" has yet to be dramatized to the satisfaction of its many admirers.—R. L. C.

"JULIA MISBEHAVES," an MGM picture produced by Everett Riskin, directed by Jack Conway, screenplay by William Ludwig, Harry Ruskin and Arthur Wimperis, adaptation by Gina Kaus and Monckton Hoffe, based on the novel, "The Nutmeg Tree," by Margaret Sharp, song by Jerry Seelen and Hal Borne. At the Palace.

"SMART GIRLS DON'T TALK," at the Metropolitan, is one more rehash of the well-born girl's crush on the gambler who stops at nothing. And a listless rehash at that.

If you ask why this familiar yarn about Gotham night spots and the gaming rooms that are open to selected clientele is remade several times a year, the answer is disturbingly simple. People go to them. If not on F st., at least somewhere in our sunny land.

This time, the usually vivacious Virginia Mayo is the girl; Bruce Bennett, once the screen's Tarzan, is the gambler, and Robert Hutton is the girl's idealistic young brother, the one, that is, who gets shot.

All three principals tackle their lines as though each word is coated with poison, which is no reflection on the performers. Any emotion you may look for in this picture won't be found in the players' faces.

All it proves, apart from crime not paying, is that somebody at Warner's Studio had the idea that the public would just love to see that gambler's den again, with guns and bullets and blondes and songstresses and all the sordid stuff that appears to go on in every cabaret the film colony ever dreams up. Could be. R. L. C.

Kansas Proves Too Much for Plucky GW, 12-0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

FOOTBALL'S ARCH CONSERVATIVE, Wallace Wade, had himself something of a binge last Saturday when he permitted his Duke football team to throw 25 passes against Navy. Old Duke men remember when Wade's idea of shooting the works was to send a ball-carrier outside tackle. He wrote the best-selling football primer entitled "Inside Guard."

POVICH

This season he's been confusing the devil out of Maryland's carefully prepared scouting intelligence with his fancy stuff. In addition to discovering the forward pass at this date, he has introduced a flanker play that most single-wing teams have been using for thirty years. He's not the old Wade, and it's not the old Duke. He has Maryland in a fine tizzy for today's affair at Griffith Stadium.

Maryland scouts came joyfully back from Duke's game with North Carolina State to report that Wade was still Wade, after his team had been held to a scoreless tie. Duke threw only four passes again State, close to par. But after that Navy thing last week when the Blue Devils tried some passes and then adopted passing as their new hobby, Maryland is looking to its own ack-ack with new worries.

IN FRED FOLGER, the Duke tailback, Maryland will be meeting up with an old acquaintance, though scarcely a friend. Folger is the fellow who stampeded the Blue Devils to that 19-7 win over Maryland at Durham last year. It's no comfort to Maryland that Folger is still injured, favoring the same ankle that slowed him up so much against Navy last week that he could dash only 42 and 37 yards with a pair of punts.

Wade wasn't going to play Folger on offense at all in the Navy game—just on defense in deference to the lad's bad ankle. There wasn't any time, however, for Wade to get him out of the lineup when Duke got the ball, because the first time Duke got the ball it was Folger intercepting a Navy pass. Wade couldn't tell quite where defense ceased and offense began, because Folger lugged his filched pass 51 yards to Navy's 4-yard line.

Within a minute and 45 seconds, Duke had the first of its four touchdowns against Navy, and that was something else for the Maryland scouts to ponder. Because it was in the first three minutes of play that Duke scored against Tennessee the week before. Maryland's new strategy calls for winning the toss and freezing the ball for at least five minutes.

WADE'S TEAM, usually no more colorful than a telegraphic chess match, was positively dazzling against Navy. Bill Cox, who relieves Folger at tailback, and does the team's passing, turned runner last week. In 15 attempts at carrying the ball, he collected 125 yards and outgained the whole Navy backfield which took the ball only 118 yards in 52 attempts.

When Folger and Cox aren't packing the ball places, fellows like Paul Stephanz, and Tommy Hughes and the two sophs, Jack Friedlund and Jack Mounie are. Stephens with his frequent line smashes is the Durham bull. Cox faked a punt and ran 61 yards for a TD against Navy. Friedlund scored on one of Wade's patented reverses. Mounie spells Stephanz at whacking the line.

Twice this year, Wade has been positively daring, calling running plays from punt formation on fourth down and making them go. Folger is something special. He hasn't practiced a minute this year. He just stands around on the ankle he hurt playing baseball last spring, and saves himself for Saturdays.

WHILE MARYLAND is moaning the loss of their big guy, Lu Gambino, Wade is weeping in accompaniment. From what they saw of Gambino last year, his loss is a blow to Duke, too, depriving the Blue Devils of the weapon of his fumbles. Last year at Durham, Gambino broke away for 57 yards in the first minute and fumbled the ball into Duke's possession, and a few minutes later another of Lu's luscious fumbles got Duke out of a hole.

Wade is making a concession in playing his sophomore backs, Cox, Friedlund and Mounie. The Wade creed for years has been that "sophomore backs fumble in spite of hell," but he's been tempting that possibility all season and getting away with it nicely.

And for years he's been getting away with these games against Maryland. Duke has mopped up the five previous games, scoring 183 points to Maryland's paltry 14. Maryland will hardly get even today, but Coach Jim Tatum could gladden Maryland hearts by sending out a team that can beat Wade. He's low man on the Tatum pole.

Unbeaten, Unscored on Terps Meet Duke Today

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

"Take Duke," the experts say.

And at 2 o'clock this afternoon that's exactly what Maryland will attempt to do.

The heralded clash between the unbeaten, untied and unscored on Terrapins and the unbeaten, but twice-tied Blue Devils is expected to lure 30,000 observers to Griffith Stadium for the day's leading Southern Conference scuffle.

At Durham, N. C., where the 10-point favored Dukes went through limbering-up exercises yesterday, Coach Wallace Wade pronounced his squad ready.

At College Park, where the Terrapins waited for their fateful battle by resting, Coach Jim Tatum said:

"We're as ready as we'll ever be. The game looks like a tossup to me."

Pitted against Maryland's razzle-dazzle, dipsy-doodle attack will be a powerful Duke line operating in front of Triple-threats Freddie Folger and Bill Cox, a sophomore whiz.

With the exception of center, where the Devils are admittedly weak, Coach Wade thinks he has molded one of his Tackle and molded one of his finest defensive lines. Tackle and Capt. Al DeRogatis is theb ulwark of the wall, spearheading the attack on offense and defense.

In Fogler and Cox, the Devils have two fine punters, good passers and elusive runners. If Maryland entertains any hopes of winning, Folger and Fox must be stopped.

Against this, Maryland offers a line equally as massive as Duke's—each averages about 215—and a fleet of scatbacks who, when they are halted, become catchers for the sharp passes of Quarterbacks Vic Turyn and Joe Tucker.

Terps To Use Two Teams

With a promise of a cloudless, warm day, the Terp attack should be at its best. There's Fullback Harry Bonk to bellwether the inside attack and Hubie Werner, Vern Seibert to skirt the ends.

There's also Turyn and Tucker to bamboozle the Blue Devil defenses with their handoffs, laterals and forward passing.

For the second straight week, the Terps will employ the two-team system, a formula North Carolina used to devastating success last year and one which Maryland found beneficial against VPI last week.

Judge Weiss Says Marshall Is Questioning His Integrity Over Disputed Offsides Play in Redskins-Steelers Game

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

"George Marshall has questioned my integrity, and I won't allow him or anyone else to do that."

So spoke Judge Samuel A. Weiss of the Pennsylvania Court of Common Pleas, during a telephone interview with The Washington Post yesterday.

The judge, whose Sunday afternoons are devoted to officiating at National Football League games, was burned up at the owner of the Washington Redskins. He was answering questions about the report he had threatened to resign if Marshall was not disciplined for his actions last Sunday at Pittsburgh. Marshall rushed on the field after the game was over and had a few choice remarks to make about the Skins' 10-7 loss.

"I don't know where such a rumor started that I was going to quit officiating," said Weiss, "unless it twas the result of a casual remark by a Pittsburgh newspaperman about a Midwestern official who recently quit officiating for one team over a similar incident."

Weiss, who acted as back judge during the Steeler game, said he had made a "very strong" report to N. F. L. Commissioner Bert Bell. He said it was dictated 30 minutes after the game and mailed early Monday morning before he'd spoken to any newspapermen about Marshall's actions.

Weiss said it was "unusual" procedure for an official to report directly to the commissioner, most reports going to the N. F. L. technical adviser, Hugh L. Ray.

The Marshall-Weiss controversy arose as a result of the following sequence of plays, leading up to the Steelers' last-minute field goal that won a 10-7 victory for Pittsburgh:

1. With Pittsburgh in possession on the Redskin 10, Joe Glamp, Steeler placement expert, prepared for a field goal effort to break a 7-7 tie. Redskin Halfback Bob Nussbaumer rushed in, blocked the kick, but was declared offside.

2. The penalty moved the ball to the Redskin 5, and Glamp lined up for another place kick. Before he touched the ball, how-

Tottering AAC Again Asks Football Peace

Cleveland, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Amid reports that the fledgling All-America Conference is tottering, Cleveland Brown owner Mickey McBride today called anew for peace with the rival National Football League.

"As it is," McBride said, "nobody in either professional football league will make any money this year. There's no point in cutting each other's throats by competing for these high-priced football players."

McBride's statements came on the heels of an AAC meeting in New York, a meeting which many reports said was an emergency session hoping to save the league.

League spokesmen denied any such trouble, but the reports persisted.

[The New York Yankees, Eastern champions, have attracted only 18,950 for their lone home game; the Baltimore Colts have drawn 20,000 less than witnessed the first four home Colt games last year and Buffalo's attendance is off about 20,000.

The Chicago Rockets continue to be a fizzle at the gate and the Brooklyn Dodgers are also flops at the gate.]

The AAC has tried many times before to make peace with the rival NFL, always getting either a rebuff or simply no answer at all. Personal animosities have a lot to do with the scant chance of an immediate agreement.

Alexis Thompson, owner of the NFL's Philadelphia Eagles, last year suggested a common draft but got no place.

The AAC lost the battle for big name rookie talent this year and consequently is suffering at the gate. So the reports of an emergency meeting and McBride's statements today fitted into the pattern.

Colts Rally, Whip Dons, 29-14

Los Angeles, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts cooled off red-hot Glenn Dobbs and the Los Angeles Dons tonight and walked away with a 29 to 14 victory in an All-America Conference football game before 40,019 fans. The Colts trailed at the half, 14-7.

Jayhawks Score Both Touchdowns On Passes

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington's plucky Colonials were unable to capitalize on two deep thrusts into Kansas University territory, and bowed to the Jayhawkers, 12-0, last night at Griffith Stadium.

It was the second loss for the Colonials on their home field this season, and they were beaten the same way as the last time . . . . through the air.

Quarterback Dick Gilman and Frank Pattee, Ray Evans' successor at right halfback, were the culprits last night. Held to only 4 completions in 17 attempts, they made them count, 2 for scores.

But it was an honorable defeat for the Colonials, who were pregame underdogs by two touchdowns.

Their two hometown backfield sparkplugs, Andy Davis and Dick Koester, showed the 13,814 onlookers some high-class running, although Davis was unable to click through the air.

Quarterback Stan Burak and Center Johnny Grinnell, played bangup games, blocking open gaping holes for Davis and Koester. End Hank Bartelloni, Tackle Jim Feula, Halfback Al Dugoff and Guard Charlie Gunner accounted for 90 per cent of the Colonials' tackles.

The Colonials, once under their own power, and once helped by a Kansas fumble, stirred up two abortive rallies. One faltered when Kansas' Dick Bertuzzi outwrestled GW's Hank Bartelloni for a 13-yard Davis pass in the end zone in the second period.

The other time, a G. W. drive misfired on the Kansas 9 when Davis was stopped inches short of a first down.

Pattee Races Kansas

Pattee was easily Kansas' all-around standout. When he wasn't running the Colonials dizzy off the Jayhawkers' T, he was pinning G. W. to the goal posts with his uncanny spot punting.

Partly because of an early Kansas stab to the G. W. 20, and partly because of two Pattee boots which bounded out on the G. W. 10 and 6, the Colonials were stuck in their own territory for the first 25 minutes of the game.

In fact, it wasn't 'til after Kansas' first touchdown late in the second quarter that GW could get out of its own tracks.

That Kansas' scoring sortie was initiated on the ground with Gilman, Bertuzzi, Cliff McDonald and Pattee taking turns for 44 yards to the GW 30. Gilman, the big Seven's leading passer, fired away at Forrest Griffith, the Conference's leading scorer, and the combination clicked.

Jimmy Kline, defending against Griffith, inadvertently helped out when he tipped the ball to the Big 9 Again Has Top Game, Michigan vs. Northwestern

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—For the second straight week, Big Nine Conference football furnishes the country with the top game of the day tomorrow.

Although the campaign is not yet half completed, the Big Nine title may be all but decided at Ann Arbor, where Northwestern and Michigan collide in the only game of the day involving two major unbeaten, untied teams.

The two Midwestern powers are as evenly matched as two teams can be. Each has won three games this season against tough competition. Both blanked Purdue, and Northwestern knocked off Minnesota, the club that was figured to wrestle Purdue for the conference crown.

Tomorrow's winner will be considered a shoo-in for the Big Nine championship. Such an honor for Northwestern would be accompanied by a trip to the Rose Bowl.

Michigan is ineligible for a repeat performance at Pasadena, having performed the chore capably last New Year's Day, but the Wolverines are seeking their eighteenth straight triumph and hope to become the first to win two league titles in a row since Minnesota did it in 1940 and 1941.

The only other Big Nine team without defeat in conference play is Indiana, which entertains Ohio State in another contest on that loop's full slate. Illinois invades Minnesota and Purdue goes to Iowa for other Big Nine games, while Wisconsin meets a visiting Yale team in one of the few intersectional tilts on the day's program.

Five family squabbles are on tap in the Southeastern Conference, where unbeaten Mississippi, the defending champion, visits Tulane and Georgia Tech, the unbeaten favorite to dethrone Ole Miss, will be at home against underdog Auburn.

The other Southeastern struggles send Georgia to Louisiana State, Alabama to Tennessee and Vanderbilt to Kentucky. Florida and Mississippi State remain home for nonconference games, the former playing Rollins and the latter Cincinnati.

A crowded day also is carded in the Southern Conference with a favored North Carolina, currently rated the Nation's No. 1 team, and Maryland, only major eleven with

This is another big football day, so remember The Washington Post's special football phone number—Sterling 5770.

Catholic's Hopes Rest on Mauiri

Catholic University's Cardinals are in for a bad day today at Ashland, Va., where they meet the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets, unless Joe Mauiri can shake off the lethargy which has dogged him this season.

The triple-threat Cardinal halfback will have to do everything right today to prevent a one-sided Yellow Jacket victory like the one they scored last year over the Cardinals.

Now that all of Randolph-Macon's injured first-stringers are back on call, the Cardinals will have to depend on their own performance to keep the game close, and Mauiri at his full potential is about the best the Cardinals can offer.

Navy Picked To Lose by 2 Touchdowns

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (Spl.).—A Navy grid force that has lost eight straight, five last year and three straight so far this season, was expected to suffer another setback tomorrow as it faces Missouri in a 2 o'clock meeting at Babe Ruth Stadium.

Navy is the underdog by as much as two touchdowns to a Don Faurot-coached eleven which upset favored Southern Methodist, 20-14, in its last outing.

Previously the Tigers lost a 21-7 decision to Ohio State and then rolled heavily over St. Louis, 60-7.

Under the coaching of George Sauer, former Kansas mentor, the Middies have managed to score a single touchdown in each of their '48 games, but it wasn't enough. They lost to California, 21-7; Cornell, 13-7, and Duke, 28-7.

Middie hopes dropped even lower this week as Fullback Bill Hawkins was sent to the hospital for a month's rest, necessitating a lineup shift that sends rookie Jim Green into the starting backfield.

Injuries to key players will force a switch in Missouri's lineup, too. Tackle Freeman Bullock and Halfback Lloyd Brinkman will get into play to replace ailing Dick Scholfield and Dick Braznell.

Tomorrow's meeting on the gridiron will be nothing new for Coaches Sauer and Faurot. The latter lost to Sauer's Kansans last year and is hoping for revenge in this encounter.

Hoyas Bar Banonis From Trip To Tulsa on Curfew Charge

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 15.—It was a leaderless Georgetown football squad that arrived here this afternoon after a 5½-hour flight from Washington. Capt. Vic Banonis, stalwart center, was forbidden to make the trip by the Rev. Emory Ross, S. J., prefect of discipline.

The closely guarded secret leaked only when the Hoyas took off in their chartered plane.

Actually, it developed, Banonis was being disciplined by the university for remaining out past the midnight curfew last Saturday. Reportedly, about a dozen other students also violated the strict Georgetown rule. All, including the football captain, are expected to be restricted to the campus for at least a two-week period.

That's the usual measure, but Georgetown takes a stern view toward curfew-breaking and the fact that Banonis was out later than 2 a. m. Sunday meant that he automatically could have been expelled from school.

Banonis, who was elected to the captaincy just before the Boston College thriller, worked out with the squad on Wednesday and Thursday but had to take his punishment with the rest and was not allowed to leave the campus limits. And that meant he wasn't able to come here for the all-important Tulsa game tomorrow.

[Reached at his Georgetown dormitory last night, Banonis steadfastly refused to say anything.

["I'm sorry," he repeated time after time, "but I just can't say anything."]

Coach Jack Hagerty, already harassed because of the loss of his injured tailback, Babe Baronowski, admitted that he was more than surprised over the Banonis incident.

"He's such a fine boy, it knocked the pins from under me. Banonis is the last man on the squad I'd expect to get into any trouble," Banonis Tells His Story

All the coaches and the Georgetown football players lauded Banonis for his sterling character. They report that he neither smokes nor drinks and is a clean-cut athlete in every respect.

Banonis' story to his coach was that he was at Union Station seeing off a friend from Detroit, his hometown. He told Hagerty that he tried to call the prefect of discipline's office five or six times to explain that he would be late.

Banonis, 214-pound husky, is a 21-year old junior. He's the brother of Vince Banonis, all-national pro league center of the Chicago Cardinals.

After that B. C. game, Al Cam-

Feller Says His Salary Won't Be Cut and He Won't Barnstorm

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Rumors to the contrary, Bob Feller will not be asked to take a cut from his $80,000 salary of last season.

Rapid Robert is the guy who says so and the one who should know. And if anyone is worried about the condition of his paycheck right arm, Feller says "My arm feels strong and I aim to keep it that way by not going barnstorming this winter. I honestly feel I'm in for a fine season in 1949.

"I'm not at liberty to give any details," Feller said at the end of the World Series, "but you'll not be wrong in writing that I won't receive any kind of a salary slash whatsoever. In fact some people might be surprised when and if my 1949 salary is made public."

The pride of Van Meter, Iowa, said he had not yet signed his '49 contract. But the hint was there that it had been thoroughly discussed with Cleveland President Bill Veeck.

This season Feller experienced his poorest year since he joined the Indians 13 years ago, winning 19 and losing 15.

Terp Frosh Turn Back Hoyas, 20-13

The Maryland U. freshmen football team burst loose with two touchdowns in the third period to erase Georgetown's 6-point lead and beat the Hoya yearlings, 20-13, yesterday on the Hoya field.

Georgetown went ahead in the first half on touchdown runs by Warren McFague, its right halfback. McFague went 25 yards from scrimmage to score in the first period, and in the second period intercepted a pass at midfield and carried it all the way across.

Maryland's first two scores were made by its fullback, Modzelloski, on a 10-yard plunge in the first quarter and a 45-yard end run in the third. The winning touchdown came on a 20-yard pass from Powers to Early.

pannis, Brooklyn Dodger scout called young Vic Banonis the country's number one professional prospect at center.

The loss is every bit as serious to Georgetown's hopes of victory as the loss of Baronowski. Bob Kelly, 285-pound Chicagoan, who has played only about a third of Georgetown's first two games, will have to bear the brunt at the pivot spot.

His only replacement will be Sophomore Bob Keller of Bayonne, N. J. Keller, 18-year-old 220-pounder, hasn't played a minute of varsity ball.

As if Georgetown didn't have enough problems in trying to piece together its first victory, the Hoya squad was somewhat overwhelmed by the oppressive heat upon its arrival.

The temperature was 85 when the boys went out to Skelly Stadium for a workout and the unhappy forecast for tomorrow afternoon was that it would reach the high 80's.

The thrice-beaten Tulsa squad reportedly is up for this one and Jim Finks, the country's leading passer on percentage of completions, may enable it to break its losing streak.

But you can't sell Georgetown short. The Hoyas are a serious bunch and they have a determination to win this one for the boys they need who aren't here.

2 European Horses Are Top Threats

By John Chandler

New York, Oct .15 (AP).—Nine horses were named today to tackle Citation in tomorrow's $100,000 Empire City Gold Cup—much to the surprise of the management. Only half a dozen had been expected for the big international race over a mile and five furlongs.

Citation has walloped everything sent against him in this country during his brilliant three-year-old campaign. The chief interest tomorrow will center on whether the great Calumet Farm champion will have any trouble handling two European performers.

It doesn't seem likely, after Citation's smashing rout of six horses in the Jockey Club Gold Cup at two miles, October 2. After that one, veteran horsemen were putting Citation's name in big letters alongside Man o' War.

The invaders from overseas are the AGA Khan's Irish-bred Nathoo, a grey 3-year-old colt, and Jean Nys' Belgian champion, the 4-year-old Bayeux, twice winner of the Vase D'or—Belgian Gold Cup.

To Be Run at Belmont

Others entered from this country, and who should know better after having tasted Citation's dust on various occasions, are:

C. V. Whitney's Phalanx, second in the Jockey Club Gold Cup; King Ranch's Better Self; the entry of Mr. and Mrs. Ben F. Whitaker's Miss Request and Carolyn A., both fillies; Mill River Stable's Argentine-bred router, Miss Grillo; Maine Chance Farm's Ace Admiral, and Fifty-Fifty Stable's Drumbeat, from California.

Empire City, which transferred its regular meeting from its own plant in Yonkers to Jamaica on Long Island, is running the big show tomorrow at spacious Belmont Park. About 40,000 are expected, with the Gold Cup post time at approximately 4:35 p. m. (EST).

Trainer Jimmy Jones sent Citation out for ¾ of a mile this morning. His time was 1:13 3/5.

Eddie Arcaro, who has been aboard Citation in his triple crown romp and other major races, will ride again.

Nathoo also was taken for a 6-furlong spin by Ted Atkinson, who was signed to ride the winner of this year's Irish Derby. His time was 1:16 flat, after Atkinson broke him from the starting gate—something strange to the foreign horse.

With 10 starters the race would gross $112,700, the winner taking $76,600. Citation has earned $744,650, and is only $29,050 back of his stablemate, Armed, in the all-time money winning list. Armed is second only to Stymie, with $911,335 as the top money-winning horse in the world.

GW Freshmen Hang 14-0 Loss On Montgomery

David Shiver and Louis Ciarrocca scored touchdowns yesterday as George Washington University freshmen defeated Montgomery Junior College, 14-0, on the Junior College field at Bethesda.

Shiver took a 19-yard pass from Bob Cilento for a score in the second period. Ciarrocca ran 16 yards off tackle for the other G. W. touchdown in the fourth period.

Montgomery Junior College threatened twice in the third period, reaching the 4 and 11-yard lines, and again in the fourth period, advancing to the 11-yard line, but the G. W. frosh stiffened in each instance.

Gwynn Park Scores

Gwynn Park High soccermen yesterday earned a 3-1 victory over Mount Rainier in the Prince Georges League. Hal Suit scored twice for the hosts and Sonny Dix scored the other goal.

Kansas Team Will Watch Sauer And Navy Today

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—You couldn't blame Coach George Sauer of Navy if he secretly wished tomorrow afternoon that a bunch of fellows up in the stands were down on the field instead.

Watching Navy play Missouri in the Babe Ruth Stadium will be the Kansas football squad. Sauer coached Kansas to two wins the last two seasons over Missouri and shared in the Big Seven Conference championship.

Minus Pool Results; Track Hit By Power Failure; Jockey Injured

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—A power failure caused racing in the rough here today but H. L. Straus' Pilaster had plenty of zip in his four legs. The 4-year-old came from behind to win by five lengths in a field of five.

The occasion was the thirteenth running of the $10,000 added Sagimore Handicap. W. W. Waters' Sassy's King was second and G. R. Wamains Calbridge was third.

The electrical difficulties originated outside of the racing plant. With the tote board, mutuel and results displays darkened and the public address system out of whack, the management had to rely on ingenuity to keep the sport going.

One customer remarked, "There ain't enough electricity around here to let a guy switch to Calvert."

The elevator man serving the stewards stand and press box was caught between floors for more than an hour. He was none the worse for his experience, but was cursing his luck.

For the most part the crowd took the inconvenience with good humor. However, the track operators had even more headaches for the featured race brought a minus show pool that cost the Maryland Jockey Club $837.50 which was not occasioned by power difficulties.

Sassy's King, despite hard usage through the stretch, held on to stave off the closing place bid of Cat Bridge. Leamour and Shadow Shot, the only others in the field of five, did not appear dangerous at any stage.

Pilaster was clocked in 2.33 flat. This was the first running of the Sagamore at today's distance of 1½ miles. The program drew a crowd of 9,605.

Favorite players also were successful in the day's steeple race. Brookmeade stable's His Boots, paying $4, came home in front of a photo for second in which H. Cantor's Rosinate got the nod over J. R. Dwyer's Lively Man.

The winner, clocked in 4 minutes flat, was handled by Jockey D. Marzani. Several spills occurred in the test and Jockey M. Flynn was rushed to the hospital with lacerations about the face. He was the lone casualty.

"I had a tip on Entranced and the darned horse won at $18.60 and there I was—couldn't get a bet down," he moaned.

Pilaster was not prominent in the early running. Sassy's King, a recent front-running winner here, set the pace and for most of the route looked all the part of a winner.

Petrol Point and Cat Bridge were closest to the pacemaker for more than a mile as Apprentice Willie Gilbert rated the ultimate winner.

Approaching the stretch, Gilbert shook up Pilaster, sent him to the outside. His cherry and white colors swept to the front of Sassy's King on the final bend and it was all over by the $4 win mutuels.

Austerity Even Reaches Into Horse's Manger

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Cockey Ted Atkinson found out today that race horses in England and Ireland don't get sugar.

Pleased with a workout by Nathoo, the Irish-bred colt he'll ride in the Empire City Gold Cup tomorrow, Teddy took a cube of sugar from his pocket and began tearing off the wrapper.

"He won't eat that," said Patrick Yade, Nathoo's trainer-foreman. "We don't get enough sugar to give to horses over there—we need all of it for our tea."

Unbeaten Central Whips Eastern; Wilson Upsets McKinley Tech, 7-6

Ramblers Lose, 26-19, To Vikings

In a wild passing duel, Central's undefeated Vikings defeated Eastern, 26-19, yesterday at Eastern, and retained their grip on first place in the Interhigh Football League.

Halfback Jimmy Pantos, who led Central to its three previous victories, had to move over and share the starring roles with End Franny Gleason, Tackle Lew Glickfield and Center Gene Million.

Gleason, ball-handler of Central's championship basketball team, did some fancy ball-toting yesterday. He got the Central scoring machine rolling in the first period when he intercepted a Don Adriani lateral and scooted 27 yards for a touchdown. Franny was also on the receiving end of one of Pantos' two touchdown heaves, a 49-yarder in the third period.

Anacostia	2	1	.667	Coolidge	9	3	.000

Glickfield and Million played great defensive games, Million recovering two Eastern fumbles.

Eastern's three touchdowns all came on passes, the last two in the final quarter. Adriani tossed a 7-yarder to Sonny Fleming that cut Central's margin to 13-6 in the second quarter. Danny Cookman, a 15-year-old sophomore, took over the pitching in the last quarter and passed to Ritchie Hite and Arnold Rollman for scores. The first play covered 83 yards, the second nine.

Rockets Hang 3-0 Loss on Hockey Lions

The Washington Lions showed the 2628 customers at Uline Arena last night a lot of vim, vigor, and vitale, but the Philadelphia Rockets showed them the only three goals of the game to win, 3-0.

Besides the fine defensive play of big Phil Vitale, the game was marked by some neat backstopping by the rival goalies in the first two periods and by unmannerly conduct by the rival defensemen in the last two periods which threatened to get bloody at any moment.

The Rockets' attack, at all times keener than the best the Lions could throw together, broke out in all its fury in the last stanza when they scored their last two goals. With wily Phil Hergesheimer at the helm, Wally Stafinaw hit the nets at 4:18.

Again in the last minute of play, Hergesheimer, picked up the puck in his own territory, dodged several Lions confronting him, and passed to Chuck Kraiger, all alone in scoring territory, who whipped it through Lew Crowd's legs.

Philadelphia picked up its first-period goal after 6:54. The puck was dislodged from a mixup in the corner near the Washington net and slid out to about 10 feet in front of the goal where Eric Prentice found it. Lou Crowdis was helpless as the puck sailed by him.

In the second period, Harvey Jessiman was tight, using both body and stick effectively to spoil stabs by Schultz twice, and once by McGuire. Crowdis, too, beat off the rubber as the period was waning.

fullback, who caught it in the clear on the 10. Bryan Sperry's placement kick was wide.

Davis and Koester fashioned GW's first threat just before intermission. With Davis hitting the middle and Koester sweeping the ends, they steamed 50 yards to the Kansas 13. It was then that Bertuzzi intercepted a fourth-down Davis aerial in the end zone.

GW got another scoring opportunity right after half time when Griffith fumbled and Gunner recovered on the Kansas 30. Koester picked up a first down on the 18, and Davis and Koester ripped to the 10. There, the drive faltered as Davis was stopped inches short of a first down.

Kansas mustered its last scoring march late in the third quarter, this time, it was Pattee by land, and John Amberg completing one pass, as Kansas drove 35 yards to the GW 30. After Charlie Moffett gave the Colonials a brief reprieve by dropping a touchdown pass by Gilman, Pattee tossed for the six pointer.

Pattee's target was Cliff McDonald who nabbed the ball, all by himself, on the GW 15 and raced over. Sperry was low with his placement this time.

Punter Pattee got off two more beauties in the time left to keep the Colonials on their heels. One went out of bounds on the GW 7, the other on the 6. In between, Kansas was rolling to the GW 15 and 18 in separate drives.

Howard, Morgan Tussle Today Rated Tossup

Howard University's Bisons meet the Bears of Morgan State in Morgan Stadium, Baltimore, today.

A large and unfriendly crowd is expected to turn out to see Howard's "Spoilers" who last year caught the Bears on the crest of a 10-game winning streak and beat them 14-6 at Griffith Stadium.

They'll see Sandy Greene, the Howard fullback who hefted his 218 pounds to bruising effect last year against Morgan's line.

And they'll also get a good look at Chris Robinson, the 184-pound junior who raced 55 yards on the first scrimmage play in the same game.

Morgan is favored, but on their records, the teams look a little more even.

Howard has taken Bluefield, 21-0, and Virginia Union, 10-0, and lists one loss, to West Virginia.

The Bears, with a convincing 41-0 win over Delaware State, and a 14-13 losing performance against the North Carolina Eagles, are looking for their second victory this season.

Cooper Sought On Check Count

St. Louis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Police were ordered today to arrest Morton C. Cooper, former pitching star for the St. Louis Cardinals, on a charge of passing worthless checks.

The arrest order was issued by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Thomas J. Krauska on the complaint of Gene White, manager of the Mark Twain Hotel. White alleged that two checks for $50 each which the hotel cashed for Cooper on August 27 had been returned marked insufficient funds. Efforts to have Cooper make the checks good had been unsuccessful, White said.

Miami Upsets Detroit, 6-0

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 15 (AP).—Great line play and expert quarterbacking gave an underdog University of Miami (Fla.) football team a 6-0 upset victory over University of Detroit tonight before 18,451 shocked fans as the Titans succumbed to their first defeat in four games this season.

Fumbles, which had helped Detroit pile up at least 34 points a game beating Toledo, Marquette and San Francisco, came back to haunt the Titans tonight as they lost the ball four times, three of them inside the Miami 20.

Tigers Now In 3-Way Tie For Second

Wilson's Green Tigers moved into a three-way tie for second place in the interhigh standings with Western and Anacostia as they upset favored McKinley Tech, 7-6, yesterday at Wilson.

All three teams have 2-1 records.

The break of the game came early in the fourth quarter when Wilson End Allan Sher fell on a loose ball on the Tech 4. On his fourth crack at the center of the line, Leo Speros scored the touchdown. George Pappafotis booted the game-winning extra point.

Tech's lone score came midway through the third period when the Trainers drove 80 yards across the Tiger goal. Jerry Spindler's pass to End Ed Cooke produced the tally. The play covered 28 yards. Eddie Herbert's kick was low.

It was Fort Hill's fifteenth straight victory in a carryover from last season.

Andy Gibson Wins Open

Baltimore, Oct. 16 (AP).—Andy Gibson scored a 5-and-4 victory over Charlies Bassler today to walk off with the Baltimore City open golf championship.

The Country Club of Maryland professional rallied in the afternoon round of the 36-hole final and kept his opponent from the Green Spring Valley Hunt Club from winning a single hole in the last 14 played.

Gibson won six and halved eight of the holes in the afternoon round to overcome a one-up lead held by Bassler after the morning play.

The victory marked the third time he captured the city title, worth $100.

Alexander Has 65 to Lead

Glendale, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—Young Skip Alexander of Lexington, N. C., fired a seven-under-par 65 today and moved into the lead at the halfway mark of the $15,000 Glendale Open golf tournament.

Leaving cofavorites Lloyd Mangrum and Ben Hogan to tie for the runner-up position at this stage of the 72-hole tournament, the long-hitting former Duke University golf captain uncorked six threes in succession on the back nine to post a 36-hole score of 70, 65—135.

His 65 established a new course competitive record for the Oakmont Country Club's layout of par 36, 36—72.

Two strokes back after today's finish were Mangrum, with a 71 to go with his 66 yesterday, and Hogan, with a 68 added to his previous 69—both for 137 blows.

Yanks Drop George McQuinn, Schulte; Dressen May Leave

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—George McQuinn, 37-year-old first baseman, was given his unconditional release by the New York Yankees today.

McQuinn was picked up as a free agent at the start of the 1947 season and his fancy fielding helped the club win a pennant and the World Series last year. This year he was a regular until midseason but was on the bench much of the last half of the campaign.

Casey Stengel, newly named manager of the Yankees, also said today that Chuck Dressen, a coach under Bucky Harris the past two seasons, had been given permission to dicker with another major league club regarding a job.

There have been reports that Dressen, whose Yankee contract has another year to go, may rejoin Leo Durocher, now manager of the New York Giants.

Stengel also said that John Schulte, bullpen coach for the Yankees, had asked for and received his release

The new Yankee manager added that if Dressen failed to connect with another major league club he would return to the Yankees next season.

Air Station Fire Feared Death Trap

Quonset, R. I., Oct. 15 (AP).—Fire that sent flames 100 feet in the air late this afternoon destroyed a repair shop at the Quonset Naval Air Station and officials feared several men were trapped in the wreckage.

The fire, pronounced under control at 5:45 p. m. (EST), two hours and 15 minutes after it began, caused damage of more than one million dollars, a Navy public information officer said. The main structure of the hangar escaped damage.

Whether any persons had been trapped remained undetermined tonight. Firemen soaked the fire area to permit search of the ruins by bulldozer.

The flames roared out of control for more than an hour and one wall of the building collapsed, injuring at least three men.

A series of explosions caused by oil tanks in the shop punctuated the fire.

Dense black smoke billowing nearly 5000 feet in the air spread over Narragansett Bay. Observers in Fall River, some 18 miles away, said the smoke was visible there.

The station fire department fought the fire for more than half an hour before calling for help from the nearby towns of East Greenwich and North Kingstown.

Woman Complains

Art Dealer Accused as Embezzler

Nejib Hekimian, 63, of 1475 Colorado ave. nw., who is a Turkish art dealer with a shop at 1342 19th st. nw., was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzlement.

Hekimian

Detective Sergts. Louis Schneider and John Apostilities of the check and fraud squad said Hekimian, an art dealer in Washington for about 45 years, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Virginia McDunn of 3133 Connecticut ave. nw.

They said she claimed she had turned over to Hekimian certain antiques in September, 1946, to sell on a commission basis, and that he had not paid her after selling them. Mrs. McDunn contends, police said, that the art dealer owes her $488.

Hekimian, whose police record shows 10 arrests dating back to 1912, was released in $1000 bond and ordered to appear today in Municipal Court.

Children Add Appeal for Bus Service

The patter of little feet yesterday helped beat out a demand for bus service to the Wheeler Terrace development on Valley ave. in Southeast Washington.

The feet, well shod, pounded the floor of the austere District Building board room while the Public Utilities Commission listened to spoken appeals for the bus service voiced by adults from Wheeler Terrace.

One little girl lay on her stomach and gleefully kicked the floor. A little boy trotted around the seats where some 50 persons, grownups and children, were gathered.

During the hubbub, Capital Transit officials said they are prepared to run a new bus line along Wheeler rd. se., passing the Valley ave. entrance to Wheeler Terrace, and about two blocks from the Terrace's seven apartment buildings which house 346 persons. But the transit company, through Dean J. Locke, staff engineer, made clear that the new line could operate only by taking the necessary bus and three drivers from existing bus routes. The 2.2-mile round-trip route would run from Nichols ave. and Portland st. se., down Wheeler rd., to Barnaby Terrace, another new apartment development south of Wheeler Terrace.

Wheeler Terrace residents, led by Norris Sachsroff, 1249 Valley ave. se., made strong appeals for the new bus service. Among those who testified were Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Lobell, Mrs. Nathan Wilanskey, Mrs. Hattie Hurwitz, Maj. G. S. Kjolsrud, USA, Lieut. Comdr. W. K. Earle, USCG, Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Ratner, Mrs. Joyce Heller, and Samuel Ganz.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan said the agency would give the request speedy and thorough attention, but "we can make no promises." The request was taken under advisement.

Community Service Unit Rejects Move On Trustees

Orders Directors, However, to Study Proposal to Add 38 Outsiders

The United Community Services' board of trustees yesterday turned down a proposal to add a slate of 38 persons from the public at large to its membership.

At the same time, however, the agency which grew out of the merger of the Council of Social Agencies and the Washington Community Chest authorized a newly elected executive board to consider adding 38 trustees chosen without special stipulation as to whether they are affiliated with UCS member agencies.

The original proposal to add trustees was advanced by the UCS interim committee headed by William J. McManus, after the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Federation of Businessmen's Associations protested that the UCS board of trustees was overbalanced on the side of representatives of the social welfare agencies to the disadvantage of the public at large.

Executive Board Named

The defeated proposal would have increased the number of individuals having no affiliation as staff or board members of operating agencies of UCS to one half the membership of the board of trustees.

At the meeting held in the YWCA at 17th and K st. nw., the UCS board also elected a 25-man executive committee. On the committee were representatives of the two critical civic organizations as well as other groups.

Among those who helped defeat the proposed slate was the Rev. J. Brooke Moseley, of the department of social relations of the Episcopal Church, who earlier issued a statement strongly opposing the proposed addition.

Charges Publicity Threat

He said the interim committee's recommendation followed urging by the Community Chest campaign committee, which had previously listened to charges by the Federation of Citizens' Associations and the Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

"Because the two groups threatened to attack the Community Chest publicly in the press on October 2—the eve of the Chest campaign—if their demands were not met, the campaign organization urged the interim committee to amend the so-called by-laws to provide for adding 38 unaffiliated persons to the board of trustees," Mr. Moseley said in his statement.

J. C. Turner, business agent of Local 77 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, AFL, told the 53 trustees present at the meeting: "I am told there are two organizations in the community who want to get rid of 22 agencies in UCS, and who said if the board was not enlarged they would withdraw support and issue a blast against the Chest October 2."

Ernest F. Henry, lawyer, who proposed the motion which was defeated said," I'm still opposed to certain agencies being members of UCS, from the point of view of obtaining funds." He added that it had become "quite evident that the balance we sought to achieve (on the board of trustees) has not been achieved."

The executive board, chosen by the trustees last night, is headed by Frank R. Jelleff as president,

Two Arrested

Cabbie Tips Off Police To Burglary

The burglar alarm wasn't working, but even with this much of a break a pair of night "shoppers" in Nathan F. Wolfe's clothing and jewelry store failed—all because of an alert cab driver.

When Wolfe closed his store, at 800 Bladensburg rd. ne., Thursday night, he noticed the alarm was not functioning so he called the Ninth Precinct and asked police to keep a sharp eye on his shop.

Even so, the store was burglarized. However, police made up for lost ground with the speedy recovery of part of the loot.

The robbery came to the attention of police because of John W. Ortenzo, 26, of 4548 Overlook ave. sw., a driver for the Eastern Cab Co.

Ortenzo picked up two men shortly before 3 a. m. at 15th and H sts. ne., and was directed to take them to 6951 Fort Foote rd., Oxon Hill, Md. Ortenzo later told police that when one of the men alighted from the cab he noticed the carton he was carrying contained some watches.

Suspicious, Ortenzo drove to police headquarters to report. When he got out of his cab, he found a watch with price tag on the floor in the back.

Detectives went to the Oxon Hill address and arrested the two men. They said they recovered several watches, two dozen shirts and a pair of trousers.

Meanwhile, Ninth Precinct police, notified of the cab driver's report, checked stores in its area and found Wolfe's store had been entered by thieves who forced the rear door.

The two suspects are cousins, aged 19 and 23. Police said they will be charged today.

2 Bolling Field GIs Charged With Holdup

Two Bolling Field soldiers were arrested by Prince Georges County police yesterday and charged with the holdup of a Marlboro filling station last Tuesday night.

They are Privates First Class Truman W. Clarke, jr., 18, of Cleveland, Ohio, and William Wachter, jr., 18, of Union City, N. J.

The men were identified Thursday night at Bolling Field by James Martz, filling station attendant who was robbed.

Martz told police he was held up at pistol point at about 11 p. m. Tuesday and relieved of $70 of station receipts, $6 of his own money and four cartons of cigarettes.

'Washie' Bratcher Free After Term For Draft-Dodging

Everett M. "Washie" Bratcher, 34, onetime Washington dance orchestra leader, was released from prison yesterday where he was serving a sentence for draft dodging.

Bratcher

Bratcher was convicted for taking benzedrine to boost his blood pressure so he might fail the physical examination of Selective Service. He began a four-year term in June, 1945, and his release gave him credit for good behavior.

He failed to pay a $1000 fine imposed in addition to the jail term. He appeared briefly before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence to take a "poor convicts' oath" attesting that he had no funds to pay the fine.

Scalp Ringworm Among District Children Reduced

Ringworm of the scalp among Washington school children has been sharply curbed in recent years, District Health Department officials reported yesterday.

William H. Gary, director of public health engineering, said that a four-year control program had limited the ailment to the point where less than 2 per cent of elementary school children now have it, compared with nearly 10 per cent four years ago.

He attributed the reduction in the number of cases to a city-wide program of cooperation among parents, school authorities, barbers, and health agencies. He said detection and treatment work is carried out in the health department's clinic at 300 Indiana ave. nw., Mondays through Fridays from 8:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m.

Pittsburgh Plans Center For Parking

City Seeking to Sell Bond Issue to Build Six Open Garages With 2400 Spaces

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15.—This city, convinced that private enterprise will not meet a critical parking shortage, has taken the first steps toward an ambitious 40-million-dollar program to provide 26,000 additional car spaces in the downtown area.

Mayor David Lawrence has appointed a five-man public parking authority, headed by Rufus Fitzgerald, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, to take over the operation of a long-range program mapped out in 1946 by community agencies in cooperation with city officials. The authority is now negotiating with financial firms for the sale of a 10-million-dollar bond issue, the first leg on the total program.

The funds will be used to finance the construction of six open-deck parking garages—similar in design to the Hecht Co. facility in Washington—in the downtown area of Pittsburgh. The structures will be four stories high with provision for roof-top parking and in some cases will include stores on the street level, following the pattern of Girard Center in Philadelphia. In all, about 2400 car spaces will be provided.

Program Must Pay Way

These plans were described today by Donald M. McNeil, Pittsburgh traffic engineer, who played an important part in the preparation of the overall program. McNeil, obviously nettled by charges of "socialism" hurled at the plan earlier by Washington officials, took great pains to emphasize that "it will be hard-boiled program which will have to pay its own way."

McNeil said the authority will set parking rates in the structures "keeping them as low as possible and yet permit liquidation of the original cost in 30 years. If it loses money it will not be subsidized by the city."

Establishment of the authority was authorized by the State Legislature. The constitutionality of creating such a group for such a purpose has been challenged by private parking interests in the courts, but was ruled legal, McNeil said. After the legality was confirmed the authority employed a New York City engineering firm—Parson, Brinkerhoff and MacDonald—to study the plans and prepare material for a financial prospectus.

500-Car Garage to Be Razed

Pittsburgh's plan was adopted on the basis that "private enterprise has not done the job," McNeil said.

"Private capital goes where the most profit lies—and that's not in parking," McNeil explained. He pointed out a three-story 500-car open-deck parking structure in the heart of the downtown section which is scheduled for razing to provide space for department store expansion.

The decision to concentrate on over-ground construction, rather than the underground type, as is planned in Philadelphia, was based on the cost factor. McNeil said underground construction would run twice as high as above-ground building.

Fringe Lots Unsuccessful

Fringe lots have been tried in this city, but have not proved particularly successful, according to the city official. One involved the renting of a 400-car lot by a department store which carried shoppers to the store in station wagons. Patronage ran about 40 cars and the project was dropped, McNeil said.

Another lot was set up by the Pittsburgh Railway Co., the local transit firm, but only 10 to 12 cars patronized the 500-car lot and so that too was ended. McNeil said the Smoky City residents "want to drive right down to the shopping area and park near the stores. If they want to use a streetcar or bus, they use it all the way" he declared.

Charles T. McGavin, official of the Washington Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, pointed out to this reporter that the District of Columbia unit, after long discussion and study, has decided that private enterprise can, and if properly encouraged, will remedy the District parking problem.

He completed his four-city study of parking rates and services with a lot-by-lot check in the Golden Triangle. Rates were similar to those in Washington, he found.

Postmistress— In her combination general store and postoffice, Mrs. Ida F. Parker commented on the proposal that Benedict become a deep-water port: "Maybe it would be a help . . . I say let's find out more about it before we say 'no' . . . it might be a help to the younger ones to build up the town."

Visitors, D. C. Bridge Teams Split Honors

By Marian Barre

Local bridge players split even with out-of-town contestants in the first two events concluded in the annual District tournament at the Hotel Roosevelt. A Baltimore partnership won the women's championship while C. C. Johnson and Miller Roberts of this city captured the President's Cup for men's pairs. The Distaff winners are Mrs. Isador Zeskind and Mrs. Stanley Newman, who defeated the defending champion, Mrs. J. E. Folline and Mrs. Leon Landauer, by 1½ points. Mrs. Folline is from Richmond and Mrs. Landauer is from Norfolk.

Mrs. T. M. Boyle and Mrs. Maurice Reddy, who led the first session, finished third. They are both from Washington. Mrs. P. E. Henninger of Arlington and Mrs. H. S. Klein, Washington, finished fourth.

In the men's games Johnson and Roberts have a five-point lead over J. J. Parish of Centralia, Ill., and Ben Johnson of Spartanburg, N. C., both life masters. Edward Pierson and N. J. McDavett of Baltimore ranked third; Herbert Gerst of Norfolk, and Ed Harlow, fourth. All teams mentioned finished less than one board under top. Thirty-four pairs competed, the field being larger than the women's for the first time in any District tournament.

The mixed pair championship was still in play late last night, C. C. Johnson and Miss Lillian Krick having entered the finals with a 25-point margin over Mrs. Landauer and Leroy Thurtell, the pernnial local champs.

The Woodward Cup goes in competition at 2:15 p. m. today. This is the ranking event of the tournament.

Greenbelt Group To Discuss Bid On Church Land

Citizens of Greenbelt, Md., will meet this morning in an effort to find a satisfactory end to their two-year search for land on which to build churches.

Acting upon a letter received yesterday from John T. Eagen, commissioner of the Public Housing Administration, who told them that Federal property could be sold to the highest bidder at a public auction, religious leaders of the community will decide whether they want to try to make a successful bid.

For the past two years the town churchmen have tried to persuade PHA to donate land in the Government project for churches or sell it at a nominal price. Both methods are outlawed by a Supreme Court decision that prohibits the Government from giving aid to religious groups.

'Potential Killer'

Youth Gets 45 Days for Racing Police

A 45-day jail term was given yesterday to a 19-year-old youth who sped at 80 miles an hour in an attempt to escape a police car chasing him

It was the first speeding offense for George Patrick Kelley, of 11132 Old Bladensburg rd., Wheaton, Md.

But so "wanton and gross" was Kelley's action that it was tantamount to a "potential killing," according to Judge George D. Neilson who sentenced Kelley in Municipal Court.

According to Police Pvts. Henry J. Schade and Clifton R. Mothershead, they first saw Kelley's car near 16th st. and Van Buren sts. nw., and clocked it at 55 miles an hour. The spotlight of the police car was fixed on Kelley who then "opened up" going as high as 80 miles an hour.

Police fired six shots at the speeding car. One bullet nicked a rear tire but did not puncture it.

They followed the car down Colesville rd. and Georgia ave. At one point, Kelley's auto skidded 50 yards and narrowly missed eight parked cars in making a turn.

In court, Kelley admitted he was speeding, and added, "I was trying to get away from the scout car."

Kelley said his car was 10 years old and that he was "in a hurry to get home."

Auto in Which 2 Were Slain Here For FBI Check

Ferndale, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—John H. Mahlan's blood-spattered sedan was sent to the FBI in Washington today in the hope a scientific examination can show who killed the young Glen Burnie postal worker and his date four weeks ago.

The car was rolled out of the Anne Arundel County police headquarters garage and driven to Washington by two officers. They ran down the two front windows, each of which has a bullet hole in it. They spread papers over the blood-smeared seats.

They also took with them five glass jars filled with earth and sand taken from several spots in Anne Arundel County.

The FBI's microscope sleuths will check them against a sandy footprint found in the back seat of the car.

3 Arraigned On Charges Of Murder

Anson M. Sloan, 39-year-old telephone switchboard installation man, was arraigned in Prince Georges Circuit Court yesterday after being indicted by the county grand jury on a charge of murdering his wife.

Also among the 40 persons arraigned were Thomas Hall, 55, and his daughter, Janie Lee, 20, indicted Thursday for murder, and Paul Courtney Fugitt, 31, and Frank F. Cowens, 41, charged with rape. Sloan was originally charged by police with murder following the death of his wife, Florence, 42, in their home at 403 Belford pl., Hampshire Knolls, Md., on September 2. She died apparently from a throat hemorrhage, according to Dr. J. T. Maloney, county medical examiner, shortly after a scuffle between the pair.

The charge was reduced to manslaughter in Hyattsville Police Court at a preliminary hearing when Sloan was held for grand jury action under $2500 bond on September 16. The investigating body, however, returned its indictment for the more serious charge. Sloan's bond was continued for his appearance in Circuit Court at a date to be set.

The Halls, who live at 5312 Maple rd., Deanwood Park, Md., answered indictments charging them with the murder of County Police Pvt. Charles F. Caldwell and assault with intent to murder Pvt. Wallace L. Baker when the policemen were attempting to place them under arrest following a disturbance at 5312 Nye st., Deanwood Park, June 12. Janie Lee Hall was also indicted for assault with intent to kill and assault and battery against Willie Preston Diggs, jr., a neighbor, during the same disturbance.

Confused by the legal language in the indictments, Janie Lee Hall first pleaded guilty to the indictments involving Diggs and then changed her plea to not guilty after questioning from the bench by Judge Charles C. Marbury. A directed plea of not guilty was entered by the jurist for the elder Hall on both counts on request of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie after the defendant expressed himself as unable to understand the language.

Fugitt and Sowens had been accused of rape September 5 by a 43-year-old Washington mother who said she was taken in Cowens' cab to an unoccupied house in Cheverly where both men attacked her. They were ostensibly taking her to visit Fugitt's sick mother, she said.

Fugitt, a refrigerator installation mechanic, who lives at 1105 6th st. sw., and Cowens, whose home is at 3378 Alder pl. ne., both entered not guilty pleas. They were released under $1000 bond each.

Hearing Bursts Benedict Deep Port 'Bubble'

Rep. Sasscer Only Advocate to Appear; Villagers Just Want To Go on Oystering

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Tiny Benedict, Md., held a special place in the sun as a possible bustling deep-water port for the Washington area—until yesterday, when that bubble burst.

Its villagers apparently can now quietly resume their future of searching the waters of the deep, scenic Patuxent River for oysters, crabs and fish, which is what most of them say they prefer.

Benedict natives were noticeably absent yesterday from a hearing at offices of the District Engineer on the port proposal.

The hearing was bound by circumstances before it began.

The Rivers and Harbors Act of 1946 called for such a preliminary inquiry, to consider a deep-water port at Benedict in lieu of such facilities at Washington. But in 1947, an Army Board of Engineers, acting on a congressional resolution of 1945, reported after extensive study that deep-water port facilities for Washington were unnecessary.

Col. Henry C. Wolfe, District Engineer for the Army's Corps of Engineers, called for those in favor of Benedict's development.

About 20 persons were in the room, including Navy, Coast Guard, Univ y of Maryland, Board of Trade, District, and other representatives—but the only response was a dull echo.

Sole proponent of the plan to testify was Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), who arrived later. Sasscer, who sponsored the call for the hearing with Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), noted:

"It would be a tremendous asset to the Nation's Capital to afford ocean-going liners an opportunity to come into that peninsula."

Little Dredging Required

He pointed out that Benedict, in Charles County, is within easy distance of Chesapeake Bay—the engineers say 26 miles—and its deep channel would require comparatively little dredging compared to Washington, which is 108 miles from the bay via the Potomac.

"Just offhand," said Ronald Orr, chairman of the River and Harbor Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, "we would be opposed to it initially," for lack of proof of its necessity. Orr recalled that in 1946 the board had termed a harbor in the Potomac economically unnecessary.

"As you well know, larger ocean ships don't like to make one-way trips, and I'm wondering what shipments would be picked up at Benedict which has no railroad or good road facilities."

Original Proposer Silent

Said Harold A. Kemp, District director of sanitray engineering, "Speaking personally, I don't see that any justification for the project has been presented."

Just before the short hearing concluded, the plan's original proponent walked in—but did not testify. He is Leander McCormick-Goodheart, former counselor for the British Embassy here, who has an estate, Bellapais, near Mount Vernon, and owns a historic seventeenth century manor house near Benedict.

McCormick-Goodheart told reporters later that his reasons for urging harbor development of Benedict in 1946 were its impressive navigational possibilities plus the fact that it would be "enormously less expensive" to establish a port there than in the Potomac.

However, since being informed "Washington business interests did not feel it worthwhile . . . there is nothing more for me to do . . . maybe 10 or 25 years from now there will be a different feeling about it."

Army engineers said they could not indicate what their report of the hearing would state, but it appeared highly unlikely that Benedict port development will be recommended in view of the testimony.

Before the hearing, interviews with some of the about-350 year-round Benedict residents indicated wide opposition to the port plan.

'Ex-Millionaire'

W. P. Moses Arrested on Bet Charge

William P. Moses, 58, described by police as a one-time "millionaire Washington gambler," was arrested by vice squad detectives yesterday in the rear of a poolroom at 1322 14th st. nw.

They seized him, they said, after watching him accept a horse bet from another man in the poolroom. Police said two telephones, two radios and two betting slips were confiscated.

Moses, who lives at 55 M st. nw., was released in $2000 bond for appearance today in Municipal Court, after being charged with setting up a gaming table.

In February 1932, Moses was robbed of $4600 worth of jewelry and a companion was shot three times by gunmen in the 1600 block of Buchanan st. nw.

Vice squad detectives also arrested Mrs. Dorothy M. Johnson, 36, of 1745 Seaton pl. nw., yesterday in her home. They said they seized a used numbers book. Mrs. Johnson was charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips and was freed in $1500 bond pending appearance today in Municipal Court.

Board Fines Policeman for Intoxication

The police trial board yesterday fined Pvt. Benton B. Royer of the Third Precinct $50 after finding him guilty of being intoxicated while off duty but still in uniform October 7.

Royer, who is 34 and lives at 411 Addison rd. ne, was let go with a warning on a second charge of wearing his uniform while off duty.

Lieut. Daniel O. Fletcher and Samuel J. Prophet who were serving as night inspectors early on the morning of October 7, testified they found Royer and another policeman, Pvt. Elmer C. Adams, also of the Third Precinct, in an areaway in the rear of the Seagull Restaurant, 1724 Pennsylvania ave. nw. They said both men appeared to be drunk.

Moyer admitted having drinks in the restaurant, but said his condition resulted partially because he slipped on the kitchen floor of the restaurant and struck his head.

Sitting on the trial board were Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert Wise, Inspector Robert Pearce and Capt. John Fondahl.

Adams, a probationary policeman, was dismissed from the force as a result of the incident.

Anti-Noise Drives Corral 6 in Area

Antinoise drives by police in Greater Washington steered six motorists into courts yesterday, on noisy muffler and horn tooting charges.

For horn tooting in the 1000 block of 17th st. nw., James W. Watson, 121 Chester way, Falls Church, Va., drew a $10 fine and a stern warning from Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court:

"This unnecessary noise of horns is a distraction to other motorists and plays an important part in the general accident picture."

According to evidence, Watson impatiently beeped his horn and nudged a car driven by Policeman G. B. Colbert during a traffic snarl Thursday.

In Bethesda Police Court, three youths each forfeited $6.45 collateral for noisy mufflers on their cars. They were Leroy S. Connelly, Rockville; George H. Linthicum, Gaithersburg, and John B. Jones, Germantown.

Two others, found guilty but given suspended sentences, were Calvin F. Kuster, 201 Harvard st., Glen Echo, and James L. Iverson, 1002 Flower ave., Takoma Park.

The two-month muffler-muffling campaign by Montgomery County police has netted several recent convictions—highlighted in one case by a judge's inspection of one law-breaking noise maker. And one acquittal—of a motorist who turned out to be a persuasive muffler salesman.

The land once belonged to the Creek Nation and was sold by the Federal Government. Judge Edward A. Tamm ruled that the council did not represent the Creeks and that the suit could only be brought through their recognized chief, one Roly Canard.

5 Baltimore Radio Stations Are Charged

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Detailed charges were filed today against five radio stations and a commentator cited for contempt of court for their handling of news about a murder case.

The newspapers also revealed that the action is based on the general powers of the courts as well as Baltimore's unique code which prohibits the publication of many details before a criminal case comes up for trial.

Complete transcripts of the broadcasts on the murder case were filed by J. Bernard Wells, the State's attorney. They were about the arrest of Eugene James, a Negro janitor who since had been convicted of first-degree murder in the knife-slaying of an 11-year-old white girl on July 6.

[James is also under indictment at Washington for a similar knife-slaying of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell June 27.]

Each reference in the transcripts to James' past criminal record and to the fact he had given a statement of confession to police was underlined by the prosecutor.

He said the underscored portions are considered contempt of court, and:

"The contempt proceedings are based on Rule 904 of the rules of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City.

"The said proceedings also are based on the general power and authority of the courts to issue citations for contempts for the protection of a prisoner's right to a fair trial."

Baltimore's Rule 904 is the special code which sets out what may not be published about a crime. It was formulated in 1939.

In other jurisdictions, the courts rely on their general contempt-powers and usually take action only when publication of details flagrantly jeopardizes a fair trial.

The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled there must be "a clear and present danger" of such prejudice.

Defendants are Stations WITH, WFBR, WCBM, WBAL, WSID and James P. Connolly, news editor of WITH. WSID, which is outside the city limits, has challenged the court's jurisdiction.

Steps have been taken to have the Maryland Court of Appeals adopt Rule 904 as a code for the whole State. The Maryland Press Association and several individual newspapers have made plans to oppose this, arguing it violates the freedom of the press.

The American Association of Broadcasters and the American Newspaper Publishers Association have entered the case against the broadcasters as interested parties.

Semiannual Auto Tests Start in Va.

Virginia's semi-annual automobile inspection drive got off to a delayed start yesterday, as State Police admonished motorists to avoid a last-minute rush by reporting for inspections early.

The 45-day drive, which will end December 1, was originally scheduled to open October 1. A delay was ordered, however, when it was learned that windshield stickers used to designate satisfactorily inspected autos, could not be delivered on time.

As usual, the inspection will center on safety equipment, including brakes, steering, windshields, windshield wipers, lights and wheel alignment.

'Morale-Builder' Coco-Cola Plea Rejected by ECA

Is the bottling of soft drinks important to European economic recovery?

The Coca-Cola Co. thinks it is. Accordingly the company asked the Economic Cooperation Administration recently to guarantee the dollar proceeds from five big new bottling plants it intended to build in western Europe.

With the request went a long and earnest memorandum, arguing that Coca-Cola is an incentive and a moral-builder for French, Italian and other western European workers.

The ECA's economic experts pondered carefully, but turned the request down. They replied that the bottling of soft drinks was not a recovery project within the meaning of the Foreign Assistance Act of Congress.

GFWC Supports Western Alliance

'Wake Up or Break Up' Is Warning To Women's Club Organizations

By Genevieve Reynolds

"WOMEN'S organizations are at the cross roads. They must wake up or break up," declared Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman of Jerseyville, Ill., national education chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She made her assertion at the organization's two-day national board meeting which opened yesterday in the Statler Hotel.

"Days of the reading and sewing circle groups are past," she emphasized. "Responsibility of creating world understanding rests on our shoulders."

Taking the warning to heart, delegates to the conclave passed two emergency resolutions at the luncheon session indorsing a Western European Alliance and demanding effective low cost housing legislation.

Wedemeyer Speaks

In addressing the dinner session last evening at the Mayflower Hotel, Lieut. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, director of plans and operations for the Army, told members of the federation's board of directors that they should use their influence to make American ideals and aims understood abroad.

"Bullets won't stop ideas," the General stated. "But ideas can stop bullets."

General Wedemeyer said that there are four major tools in this country's international strategy—political, economic, psychological and military—and the last should be used only in the event of failure of the other three.

"I don't think military force is the solution for the problem that confronts us today," the general said. But, he continued, we should be prepared to give economic assistance to other free enterprise governments; we should "make a firm alliance" with other peoples who share our political principles, and we should have a free exchange of students, professors, literature and art with other countries so that they may learn the truth about us.

General Wedemeyer pointed out that people of Russia haven't the slightest conception of what we are striving for and that it is "mandatory that we get our message to all the people of the world, especially to areas of potential enemies."

General Wedemeyer was preceded on the program by Dr. Stringfellow Barr, president of the Foundation for World Government.

For World Government

Dr. Barr, former president of St. John's College at Annapolis, Md., described the People's World Constitutional Convention—still in the blueprint stage—which is being planned now by several members of the British Parliament. He said Great Britain intends to hold a nation-wide popular ballot to select its delegates to the convention and then to invite all other nations to join.

Dr. Barr urged a revision in the United Nations charter, or perhaps even a complete new world constitution, that would bring about a world government of peoples, not of nations.

He said there is no longer a choice of whether or not there will be a world government—the only choice now is what type, "tyranny, or a federal world republic."

He expressed the opinion that America and Russia seem to be "heading blindly toward war," and that the only prevention of that would be immediate establishment of a working world government.

For Western Alliance

The resolution supporting a Western Alliance reads as follows—"the GFWC support any necessary legislation to implement the plans for self defense of those members of the United Nations with whom the United States may join, in the interests of our own security, provided that such action is consistent with and supplementary to the continuation of the Economic Administration (European Recovery Program)."

An original resolution on housing asked Federal aid for slum clearance but after lengthy debate and much opposition among the board members and State federation presidents the motion was amended and passed in this form—"Whereas housing legislation passed in the special session of the Eightieth Congress aims to stimulate the production of moderate and low sales price and rental housing, it fails to make provision for the lowest income families who are acutely affected by the housing shortage and new legislation is promised.

"The Board of directors of the GFWC urges the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing a more comprehensive long range approach to the Nation's housing problem, particularly low cost housing.' "

Mrs. Chapman told the some 80 federation heads present that a new adult education program must be initiated to stimulate greater education in that field. She suggested discussion groups in schools and communities to carry out the project.

"Talking and planning is just the first stage," she cautioned. "It must be followed by concrete action. World order and peace depend upon people. Hence, more education is essential.

Gadgets Won't Suffice

"A nation is as great as its people," she continued. "Natural resources, inventions and gadgets won't solve the world's problems. Only the brains of the people can solve them."

Mrs. Chapman said that 47 German schools have been adopted by the Junior Clubs of the federation. One club, she said, also had adopted a school in Kentucky through the Save the Children's Federation, and a school in Greece.

Mrs. Leslie B. Wright of this city, national chairman of the federation's legislation, reported that the organization had been more successful on international issues it backed in Congress than in domestic ones. 'Our worst setback was the failure of Congress to renew the Reciprocal Trade Agreement."

She told the group that Representative Leo Allen, chairman of the House Rules Committee "has killed more legislative bills than any one man. "You women from Illinois should do all you can to make him see the light or see that he's ousted by the electorate."

In her report at the morning session, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the federation, revealed that the federation representing the voice of eight million women had been asked to join other women's groups in a sales resistance campaign but had declined. "Decision of the federation is that it does not wish to join that program nationally because we feel that our women buy well and thoughtfully," she explained. "But that doesn't mean individual clubs can't join in such a campaign. For example, the Florida federation is supporting a meat resistance campaign."

Mrs. T. C. Carrol of Shepherdsville, Ky., chairman of the citizenship department, told the audience that the meaning of citizenship has changed from mere "American citizenship which we inherited to world citizens. The type of world we have depends on the type of Democratic citizenship the United States gives to the world."

To build good American plus good world citizenship she recommended "teaching obedience to law in a democratic family; emphasizing social behavior in home—give and take, share and share idea for training in community participation; responsibility to duty, and giving spiritual training."

The federation's 1948 general convention will be held at Hollywood Hotel in Miami, Fla., according to an announcement made by Mrs. L. J. McCaffrey, convention chairman.

Mrs. M. E. Morland of Alabama, religious education chairman, called upon the women to inaugurate religious forums in the churches. She said that such a forum is being successfully conducted by all faiths—Protestant, Catholic, Jewish—in the Birmingham, Ala., churches.

Then she asked "How can a child be good today with so many detrimental comic books, bad movies and radio programs?"

Mrs. Morland requested the federation members to personally inspect comic books, radio programs and movies in their individual communities and see to it that the children get only the best.

At an earlier session Miss Dorothy Scurlock, director of the federation's youth conservation program, reported that the organization is cooperating with the Parent Teachers Association and other women's groups to seek better radio programs, movies and comics. She, too, suggested inspecting the comic supplies at the corner drug stores.

Reports and resolutions will be featured at the concluding sessions starting at 9:15 a. m. today Social highlight will be a reception honoring the wives of chiefs of diplomatic missions at 5 p. m. at federation permanent headquarters at 1734 N st. nw. Other sessions will be held in Hotel Statler.

Mrs. Farrington Heads G. O. P. Women's Clubs

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, Washington, D. C., and Honolulu, today was elected president of the National Federation of Women's Republican clubs.

Mrs. Farrington, wife of the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii, will take office January 1, succeeding Mrs. Addison B. Green, Holyoke, Mass. Mrs. Farrington also is president of the League of Republican Women of Washington.

Her election came at the final business session of the two-day tenth annual convention of the organization. Tonight the delegates attend a public rally in the St. Paul auditorium at which Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Republican presidential nominee, speaks. Mrs. Green will introduce Dewey.

Delegattes today heard predictions of a GOP victory from high-ranking party members.

Hugh Scott, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said, "Victory is in the air" and that the party seeks "a mandate for a housecleaning in Washington—a mandate of such proportions that it will be understood beyond all doubt the world around."

Senator-elect Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) said there were two basic issues of interest to women in the campaign—high prices and foreign policy.

"Those of us who kept house as far back as the last Republican Administration—16 long years ago—ruefully remember the lower and fairer prices of Republican days," she said.

Other officers elected today were: Mrs. Walter S. McNab, Schenectady, N. Y., first vice president; Mrs. J. T. Urquhart, Yakima, Wash., second vice president; Mrs. C. D. Vernon, Des Moines, Iowa, third vice president, and Mrs. J. W. Hunt, Oswego, Ill., secretary. Mrs. Harold Achor, Anderson, Ind., was reelected treasurer.

Gay Parties Gather For Lounge's Opening

By Marie McNair

THE MAYFLOWER LOUNGE, which opened for the season, was the place to be last night. That is if you went first to the National Theater or to the cocktail party and dinner at the Westchester which opened the new Holiday Room decorated by Dorothy Draper.

Lights flared, banners flew over the marquee at the National Theater for the first performance of "Red Shoes" on the reopening of the National Theater as a movie house.

MRS. McNAIR

Dignitaries in top hats, dowagers in top fashion blinked before the camera flash bulbs and the settings of a television show. The Women's Advertising Club of Washington sponsored the premiere, and the house was filled with members of diplomatic, official and resident society.

Last night's top-drawer audience had a reminder of the theater's long controversy. As they entered the refurbished old building they were given handbills protesting the National's closing as a legitimate theater because of its policy of admitting only white patrons. The leaflets were signed by the Council for Civil Rights for the Nation's Capital.

At the annual champagne and orchids fiesta at the Mayflower the Chief of Staff and Mrs. Omar Bradley and the Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall, were guests of Princess Halim of Egyt. The princes entertained at dinner before the lounge opening and her other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Noel Macy, Mrs. George R. Holmes, Hugo Gouthier of the Brazilian Embassy and Frank Rediker.

Mrs. Royall wore an Alencon blue lace gown, the one in which she sat for her portrait, and Princess Halim was in black velvet with diamonds.

CAPT. AND MRS. WILLIAM H. WATSON entertained at a table for 10, Mrs. Watson wearing a billowing gown of white lace.

Mrs. Fred Britten, who lives at the hotel, had 10 guests also, and at Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Freer's ringside table were their guests from New York, Mr. and Mrs. Percy A. Shay. Both ladies were in black gowns, Mrs. Shay's having touches of vivid green. Others there were Judge and Mrs. George D. Neilson, Miss Rose Saul, Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Col. and Mrs. Andrew Van Esso, W. H. Bliss, Mrs. Grace Llewellyn, Mrs. Thomas Eberly and Mrs. Winifred Shelton of Honolulu.

Col. Serge Obelensky was here from New York and also in the gathering were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. J. W. Heard, Capt. Samuel G. Kelly, USN, and Mrs. Kelly, who have just returned from England.

How to Dispose Of Draperies

Do you know of any agency or store which might be of assistance to me in selling my draperies? I have three pairs of beautiful brocade drapes. They are solid color green satin brocade, very wide and fully lined and a pair of blue satin brocade with a gold thread through them. Our little apartment is too informal to stand them. G. S. C.

If you wish to find a buyer to purchase the draperies direct from you, I would suggest an advertisement in The Washington Post. If you wish to sell them through a dealer, there is a store in Alexandria which sells all sorts of articles for their customers. They tell me they have much demand for draperies and that their supply is now low. You can contact them by calling Alexandria 0649.

Do you know of any Washington store that sells, by the yard "Byrd" cloth or a similar material which could be used for patching children's snow suits made of this material? G. F. F.

I have not been able to find a store in Washington which sells this fabric. I understand that water repellent cotton gaberdine and sail cloth is sometimes available by the yard, but have not been able to find a Washington store which has either at the present time.

I have some china which has a ridged design around the edge. Some of my sauce dishes are stained in the hollows of these ridges and won't come off. As any liquid substance which is used would have to cover a flower design in the bottom of the dishes, I have hesitated to use a bleach. G. F. F.

Have you tried washing the ridged areas with a soft brush and soap? If this doesn't remove the discoloration, perhaps you could apply a diluted bleach to the stained portion (I'm taking for granted that there is no color in the ridged design) in such a way as to avoid getting it on the design in the bottom of the dishes. This could be done by inverting the dish in a pan containing just enough bleach to cover the edge of the dish as it is inverted. Or, another way to apply it would be to saturate a cloth with diluted bleach and lay it only over the stained area.

Interesting Soup

Alphabet noodles are always an incentive to the kiddies to eat their soup. They seem to enjoy seeing how many different letters they can pick out and the nourishing broth is down before they know it.

Lumpy Gravy

If you have trouble making smooth gravy for roasts, try adding the salt to the flour before dredging it into the hot fat. It will help greatly in keeping it free from lumps.

FACTS ON A FOREQUARTER: Grading and inspection marks on a forequarter of beef are pointed out by Miss Marie Gifford, head of Consumer Service for a nationally known meat company, to University of Maryland home economics students as they tour a local packing plant. Lessons From Packing House

Students Get Inside Tips on Meat

By Lucia Brown

TWENTY-NINE home economics students, including a former Philippine guerilla, got some inside tips on selecting and preparing meat on a tour here this week.

Coming in from the University of Maryland, they inspected a large packing plant on 12th street from meat cooler to smokehouse—learned how sausage is packed, r eat graded, steaks cut and all the rest.

Miss Felicitas Salvador Tacderis of Manila got a special thrill out of the expedition. At the plant, she ate her first American hot dog, complete with mustard and bun.

Smiling little Miss Tacderis, a liaison worker between native guerillas and the American Army during the war, arrived from the Philippines last week to study at Maryland. She became interested in home "ec" while official hostess for her father, a provincial governor, and plans to teach it when she returns to the Philippines.

Tells of Grading

The difference between grades of meat was pointed out by John R. Meyer, manager of the plant. He showed how beef is graded according to grain, color, texture and "marbling" (the intermingling of fat with lean), and plainly marked so the housewife can tell what she's buying at the store.

Miss Marie Gifford of Chicago, director of consumer service for the national company operating the plant, talked to the girls about economical meat cuts. Here are a few of her tips on wise meat usage:

When you buy a roast, figure out exactly how many meals you're going to get out of it and try to stick to your plan. Don't serve all your beef meals in a row, though. Scatter them through the week.

Make leftover meat dishes interesting—not just a plate of warmed-over meat.

Serve at least one "budget" meat a week—spareribs, ground meat, or some variety meat such as kidneys.

Instead of a big meat loaf, make little individual ones. They bake in half the time, have the virtue of novelty and a generous portion of good brown crust for everybody.

Good dish made with frankfurters in polka dot casserole. Make by alternating layers of sliced potato and sliced franks in a casserole. Cover with milk, top with plenty of cheese, and bake in the oven.

Soft Diet Palls

Let Baby Take Lead With Foods

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Babies outgrow their interest in smooth, pureed foods and need to be provided with food of different textures which inspire chewing. The longer a child stays on sieved foods the more stubborn he may become about using his new teeth.

It's wise to let the child take the lead in this. If there is a reluctance to eat the sieved, mashed food, then try some of the coarser foods. One baby who pushed away her spoonfuls of mashed banana, picked up cubes of them from her feeding tray and ate them eagerly.

The same tactics may be adopted when the child is tired of sieved vegetables or precooked cereals. Carrots cut into cubes or slivers, small pieces of meat in the hand, a section of skinned orange, may be accepted with curiosity and appreciated when the same food served in the usual way will go begging.

Try Chopped Meats

One mother said her baby would not eat any of the prepared meats. I assumed that she meant the sieved variety and suggested she try coarser cut meats—also to be had in cans—or try chopping or cutting finely some of the meats served at the family table. Meat is easily digested even if it doesn't get too thorough mastication.

When the baby is 2 years of age he can eat with some exceptions, most of the foods the rest of the family get.

He can partake of meats—except ham and sausage — vegetables, fruits, puddings, breadstuffs and cereals, just as the family gets them. Food will be cut into small pieces for easier chewing, or for holding in the hand when the spoon defies the child's manipulation.

Highly seasoned foods, or rich, oily foods are taboo in the child's diet. The first are unnecessarily stimulating, and spoil the child's appetite for simple, bland foods. The rich, fatty foods tax the child's digestion.

Mothers get into inflexible habits and forget that the baby is growing and may need some change in the type and character of the foods served him.

Our leaflet No. 26, "Diet From One to Two Years," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Culpeper Man Escapes Jail In Sex Case

Daniel M. Burke, 24, of Culpeper, Va., was given three years probation yesterday when he pleaded guilty in District Court to simple assault on a 29-year-old female employe of the French commercial counselor's office.

Burke was originally indicted for assault with intent to rape. However, the United States Attorney's office stated that there was no evidence of the intent necessary to sustain a conviction on the graver offense. The assault took place on June 26 in Rock Creek Park.

In another case, Andrew P. Gordon, 29, of 4653 Hayes st. ne., was given 6 to 18 months jail on charges of possession of lottery slips and operation of a numbers lottery.

A piggy-bank theft of $100 sent Miss Ida Bell Jones, 22, a maid of 947 Rhode Island ave. nw., to jail for one to three years. She was charged with larceny of the funds from her employer, Mrs. Ruth Dub, 3806 Brandywine st. nw.

David S. Kornbluth, 29, formerly of the Hotel Roosevelt, was given 20 months to five years prison on bad check charges. According to the evidence, Kornbluth cashed $700 in bad checks and posed as a Government inspector to obtain another $600.

Young Ends Hearing Into Phoebus Case

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, announced yesterday that he has concluded closed hearings on charges that William M. Phoebus as a District building inspector submitted false reports on inspections.

General Young said the case will be taken up soon by the three-member board of District Commissioners, possibly in their meeting Monday. Final decision will be up to them.

General Young said that inspections officials, Phoebus, and the latter's attorney, John B. Diamond 3d, were present during the final three-hour session of the closed hearings yesterday in the general's office.

It was learned that Phoebus urged that, in view of his 22 years of city government service, he be retained on the job with a pledge not to repeat the acts on which the charges were based.

Attorney Diamond, answering a reporter's questions, voiced belief that proof had been made that Phoebus had not in fact failed to inspect any buildings he claimed to have inspected, although there were errors in his reports of the times such inspections had been made.

Phoebus has cited ill health as an explanation for discrepancies in the times he gave in his reports on building inspections.

He has been on annual leave pending outcome of his case.

1 Fighter Group, 5 Bombers Seen Alaska Defense

By The Associated Press

The United States' air defense in Alaska this winter apparently will consist of five bombers and one group of about 75 fighters.

At the other side of the American defense perimeter, the Panama Canal Zone, there now is no organized air combat unit.

This came to light yesterday in connection with an Air Force announcement that three five-plane flights of the new B-50 bombers will rotate on training missions in Alaska between November 1 and March 15. Under this program, only five of the bombers will be in the area at any one time.

The only other combat unit in the polar frontier sector is the fighter group regularly stationed there.

'Uncanny' Is Word for Budapest 4

By Paul Hume

Uncanny is one word this reviewer heard applied to the precision with which the Budapest Quartet plays chamber music.

Their second program of the season, given last night and the preceding evening in the Library of Congress, was marked by some fine ensemble work. As in the previous week, their Mozart proved most magical. The opening of the wonderful slow movement, and the way they make such guests as Carlton Cooley seem a part of their permanent scheme of things is great art.

It was Mozart's D Major quintet, dating from his last full year of life. Such profundity of expression remains as much of a creative mystery today as when it was first heard. Dvorak came into the musical season for the first time, with his only string sextet, composed in his thirty-seventh year. (Mozart never reached the age of 37.)

Those materials that came most easily to Dvorak in instrumental writing are constantly evident in his sextet. Both in the unique melancholy of slower sections, and in the gayety of dancing movements, Dvorak is a man who knows and loves the music of his countrymen.

A Brahms sextet antedating Dvorak's by 13 years completed the program. Though tonalities were different, the color and sound of the two sextets produced more than a little monotony after a time, particularly since Brahms' music in this form lacks the beauty of his later quintet in the same key. If contrast was intended in juxtaposing these works, the distinctions were too subtle for many ears.

Throughout the evening the music was played with a tone which ravished the ear. It is the sort of music that lies so well in the Budapest players—but what chamber music does not? Benar Heifetz joined Cooley and the quartet for the latter works.

Bay Bridge Plan Is Opposed at Baltimore Hearing

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Twenty-odd persons attended a city council-sponsored public hearing today on the proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge.

Stevenson Masson, a steamboat agent, said the bay bridge would block with ice the entrances to the Patapsco and Magothy rivers, just as the Potomac River bridge impounds ice "all the way up to Washington."

"You'll pay through the nose, either in the loss of shipping business or in the increased expense of keeping the bay open."

Other speakers against construction of the bridge were Thomas Williams, a tugboat captain; John H. Laveck, head of a ship cleaning company, and an unidentified woman spectator who said Masson's statements had "convinced me the bridge would be detrimental to Baltimore."

Apparently the most the city council could do, if it voted to oppose the bridge, would be to pass a resolution urging the State or the War Department to hold up the project.

Chinese Christian Art to Be Shown Today, Tomorrow

States Righters To Carry Virginia, Thurmond Says

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 15 (AP).—Confidence that the States' Rights Democrats "will carry Virginia" was expressed today by presidential nominee J. Strom Thurmond.

Governor Thurmond, who has pushed his campaign in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Kentucky in the past few weeks, said that "sentiment is growing strongly for us every day."

Thurmond said that the States' Righters "might take Kentucky," the home State of Senator Barkley who is running for Vice President on the regular Democratic ticket with President Truman. Thurmond spoke in Covington last night.

"As soon as people become acquainted with the principles and the situations, they rally to the States' Rights," Thurmond said. "I only wish we had more time to present our fight to more people."

India Reports Heavy Fighting in Kashmir

New Delhi, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Indian Defense Ministry said tonight there has been renewed heavy fighting in Kashmir.

Virginia Aid To Counties Up 216% in Decade

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—Virginia counties are paying a steadily smaller share of the cost of their activities, although their local tax collections never have been better, State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett reported today.

Bennett released a report on his annual study of the comparative cost of local government in Virginia for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1947.

Major Facts Drawn

These were among the major facts drawn from his figures:

(1) Virginia counties in 1946-47 received 49.12 per cent of their total revenue from the State; as recently as 1933, the State put up only 29.2 per cent of the total.

(2) Only 6.1 per cent of the counties total tax levy of 1946-47 was unpaid—the smallest percentage ever recorded. Counting collections of delinquent taxes, the counties actually took in fractionally more than their total levy for the year.

(3) The counties' net debts of $14,649,000 were the lowest in 20 years with the exception of the 1945-46 year, and the increase over 1945-46 was $213,000. The consolidated gross debt actually declined $725,0000 to its lowest point in recent history.

(4) The Commonwealth paid more than half of the cost (52.7 per cent) of operating county schools in 1946-47.

The figures showed the counties in 1946-47 were raising more from local taxes than ever before—$23,828,000—up 56 per cent in the past 10 years. But they were receiving more from the State than ever before—$26,543,000, up 216 per cent in the past 10 years. Federal supplements in 1946-47 amounted to a record $3,663,000, up 662 per cent from payments of 1937-38.

Expenses Soar

Total county expenditures of $56,428,000 for 1946-47 included more than 40 million dollars spent for school purposes, as compared with $16,814,000 spent for school purposes in 1937-38. The 40 million dollars, in turn, included $24,577,000 for teachers' salaries, 10 million dollars for other operational costs, $4,169,000 for capital outlays, and $1,325,000 for interest and debt redemption.

The report showed that Arlington County for the period received $3,650,573.20 from local sources and $931,897.34 supplementary revenue from the commonwealth (20.12 per cent of its total revenue).

For the period Fairfax County received $1,050,610.57 from local sources and $571,502.57 in supplementary revenue from the Commonwealth (34.10 per cent of its total revenue).

The counties spent $1,251,000 on crime prevention and detection, as compared with $389,000 for these purposes in 1937-38. They spent $491,000 on fire protection, nearly five times what they spent 10 years ago. Despite relatively prosperous conditions in the 12-month period, they spent $4,862,000 on public welfare, more than three times the amount spent in 1937-38 and nearly eight times the welfare expenditure of 1932-33 in depression days.

Shoplifting Case Against Dutch Woman Dropped

The United States Attorney's Office yesterday nolle prossed a charge of petty larceny filed against Mrs. Anna DeHann, 61, Dutch housekeeper at 1619 34th st. nw.

Mrs. DeHann stole two pairs of ladies hose and a bathrobe from Kann's Department Store here, police said, because she was ashamed to return to Holland without gifts.

She was allowed to withdraw a plea of guilty, plead innocent, and then the nolle prosse was entered so that she could return to Holland with a clean record.

A COUNTRY PLACE
Plan to come out and see this Sunday, between 2-6. You'll find a quaint little old farmhouse, on 2 fertile acres. Inside, the place has been carefully and tastefully restored. It has combination living-dining room, den, and pine-panelled kitchen on 1st floor, 2 bedrooms and bath upstairs. The Dutch door, draperies, and architecture are right for Early American furniture. Oil h.-w. h. and kitchen equipment are excellent. A barn, power mower and tractor are included. Located in prosperous farm country between Chantilly and Herndon, 45 minutes from D. C. Come out on Route 50 to Chantilly, turn right, go about 3 miles to "open" sign. Perhaps you'd like to make an offer on this unusual property.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

His Speech Un-Red, the Speaker Fled

Thurman Arnold, who takes his politics seriously, is still getting some kidding about the day he set out to address "a P-T A meeting."

A last minute inquiry into the identities of the other speakers revealed the presence of a few whose views ranged from pale pink to bright crimson.

Horrified, and puzzled, Judge Arnold investigated further, and found that there had been a slight misunderstanding. It wasn't the P-T A, but the CIO's P. A. C.

The judge beat a hasty retreat.

NIGHT AND DAY

The men who paint traffic lines on our streets were working on Highway Bridge again the other day, and I griped to Traffic Director Keneipp about it.

"Why," I asked, "can't those guys work at night, when they won't block traffic so much?"

"One crew does work at night," answered Keneipp. "I have a day crew and a night crew. But Highway Bridge is usually a day job because there's so much traffic there that it doesn't make much difference which hour of the day or night you choose—it's always busy.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "here's a curious fact. We have to renew those lines on the bridge about every two weeks. The traffic is so heavy that Highway Bridge lane lines need more frequent painting than any other in town."

So I can't help but wonder why the Highway Department doesn't also switch to night work at strategic spots.

For example, this week's road repairs on Highway Bridge narrowed traffic to two lanes, and inconvenienced tens of thousands of motorists.

Isn't it reasonable to assume that fewer people would have been delayed if the work had been done at midnight, instead of at noon?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three small kittens, playful and healthy." (Dupont 9228 after 4 p. m.)

"Ten half-grown kittens, assorted colors. Take your pick. Will deliver." (Lincoln 8686.)

"Affectionate, well-trained male fox terrier, 1 year old." (Trinidad 3356).

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Have you noticed that Capital Transit is taking the "heads" off its fare boxes?

After the changeover is completed, we won't slip our coins (or tokens) into a narrow slot any more. We'll dump them into a wider opening.

The reason: Capital Transit expects to start collecting cash fares of 13 cents soon; feeding four coins into a narrow slot would hold up the passenger line and slow up service.

Incidentally, some transit companies station expediters at stops which handle a great deal of streetcar traffic. The expediter sells tokens (or tickets) and makes change, so that passengers can move quickly once they begin to board the car.

The same idea was tried in Washington during the war, but a company spokesman says that "it would make no material difference" under present conditions.

"Besides, it takes manpower—and we need all the manpower we can get to run the cars."

OVERHEARD IN FRONT OF A JEWELRY STORE

First Girl: Gee, I wish my fairy godmother would come along and give me my pick.

Second Girl: I'd rather have a shovel.

MISCELLANY

Betty K. Shapiro of 5112 New Hampshire ave. nw., tells me that the volunteer workers who "manned" the United Nations Service Center during the war are going to hold a reunion dinner on the 27th of this month. Volunteers may make reservations (up to the 22d) by calling Mrs. James B. Harper on Woodley 9131 . . . Geraldine W. Stuntz of 910 Garland ave., Takoma Park, Md., relays a story from a friend whose mother-in-law is an inveterate back-seat driver. The other day the fellow stopped his car with the back wheels on the streetcar tracks and the front wheels clear. When the motorman started clanging his bell, the mother-in-law started yapping for action, whereupon the worm turned and put a permanent stop to the back-seat driving. "My end is clear, mother dear," he murmured. "Why don't you do something about yours?" . . . An Anacostia reader warns cat owners to keep an eye on their pets; "savage dogs" in the neighborhood . . . and another reader has a word of advice to women who leave their purses in grocery carts while they go off for a can of something or other. "When I reported my purse stolen to the manager," she says, "he merely sighed and shrugged and said it was the fifth one stolen that way in a month. What could he do if people didn't watch their purses more carefully?" . . . Sergt. Donald Rugg recently took time out from a long siege at Walter Reed to fly to Buffalo and back and en route chewed the fat with Capital Airlines Hostess Frances Taylor. Later, when Don was back in the hospital, Frances and two other stewardesses, Helen Colbert and Frances Burson, dropped in to pay him a visit, and my spies report Don's eyes were "as big as saucers" when they walked in . . . And why not? It isn't every soldier who gets visits from three airline cuties.

WE'RE AGIN' EVERYBODY

There's so much dissatisfaction with all the major candidates this year that the November ballot ought to provide a space for those who just want to vote against somebody.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Gov. Dewey's itinerary will include a stopover at the American Legion convention . . . The rare necklace worn by Taglioni when she did the "Pas de Quatre" ballet more than 100 years ago—it's been on loan at the Boston Museum—was presented by its owner, Carl Van Vechten, to Alicia Markova Sunday night, when she re-created Taglioni's "Pas de Quatre" . . . Mark, the eccentric coiffeur, will create a special coiffure for the mane and tail of Champion, Gene Autry's horse, at the Madison Square Garden Rodeo.

Nanette Fabray, star of the new musical, "Love Life," has a brother, James who works for Douglas Aircraft in California. Last Wednesday he suddenly learned that he could fly East in the test flight of a new Douglas plane. He flew to New York with nothing other than the California clothes he was wearing . . . He arrived a few hours before the show opening. Miss Fabray tried to get a ticket for him, but couldn't. "In the meantime, buy a dark suit to wear at the opening," she told her brother. He went to a midtown store, selected a suit, but told the tailor to wait before making the cuffs and alterations. He phoned his sister every five minutes, and as soon as she told him "I got the ticket," he told the tailor "Okay. I'll buy it. Make the cuffs."

Allyn McLerie of "Where's Charley?" is Broadway's newest sensation. Her singing and dancing is the most refreshing thing in the theater in many seasons. . . . Margo Jones, producer of "Summer and Smoke," and author Tennessee Williams motored all over Italy searching for a statue of an angel to use in the production. The angel they finally used in the show is a N. Y. angel . . . Anton Dolin finished his manuscript on the ballet, left it with some old newspapers on the sofa, and his maid—an orderly woman—threw all the papers into an incinerator. Dolin will miss the publication-deadline, but has started writing again.

Ching Caught in Dewey's Blast

By Drew Pearson

Keeping the record straight—speaking in Pittsburgh, Governor Dewey made this significant promise to the voters: "We will bring a new and vigorous leadership to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service so that major disputes can be settled before they become strikes."

Ching

What Dewey didn't know was that the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is already being run by Republicans. Its head, Cyrus Ching, is a lifelong Republican and has been doing such a good job that Congressman Fred Hartley of New Jersey, co-author of the Taft-Hartley Act, praised him highly.

Ching is a former big-business executive, spent most of his life with the U. S. Rubber Co., is former president of the American Management Association and a member of the bluestocking club of big business, the National Association of Manufacturers.

After 30 years in business, Ching felt it was his duty to give part of his life to his Government and, at great financial sacrifice, became chief of the Labor Conciliation Service—a thankless job in which you get kicked around by both sides.

Ching returned to Washington the day after Dewey's blast and read in the newspapers what his own candidate had said about him. During the trip Ching had reorganized important Conciliation Service offices, changing personnel, improving morale. Unfortunately, Dewey's blast cut the ground out from under that morale, because newly hired personnel now expect to be fired.

Uncle Sam's Vodka

Joe Stalin may not know it, but while his agents have been trying to dope out our atomic bomb, the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau is trying to dope out Russia's most explosive concoction—vodka.

The bureau's alcoholic tax unit will hold a hearing October 25 to explore vodka production in the USA. Various small U. S. distillers are making vodka, but their products are as variable in quality and alcoholic proof as American "moonshine."

Uncle Sam's "revenooers" now aim to establish a set formula that will approach Uncle Joe's standard, so the public will know what it's getting when it buys domestic vodka. Uniform regulations on distillation and type of containers for storage appear likely.

Note—Vodka is nothing more than alcohol treated to a highly refined degree with activated carbon or charcoal.

Fraud Against Ex-GIs

United States District Judge T. Whitfield Davidson of Dallas, Tex., certainly seems to love the real estate operators.

He has been hearing charges of frauds against veterans by 27 Dallas home builders, first exposed by this column and later indicted by the Justice Department, and believe it or not, the judge has been levying token fines that don't even make up for the illegal profit extorted. Some of his remarks from the bench, also, have indicated almost brazen partiality toward the real estate boys.

When Roscoe Dodson pleaded guilty to overcharging a former GI $1000 for a home, all he was fined by Judge Davidson was $100. Dodson didn't even have to pay back the overcharge, so he came out $900 to the good on his illegal deal.

Another builder, W. C. Chappell, did even better. He overcharged a veteran $1500. When he started to plead guilty, Judge Davidson said he would accept a plea of "nolo contendere"—no contest. In the end, Chappell was fined $100 and allowed to keep the remaining $1400 overcharge.

The judge went up to a $200 fine in one case. He soaked H. Little and L. M. Dabney, real estate operators, $200 each for a $1350 overcharge against veteran J. C. Jackson. E. T. Swango, whose house was sold to the veteran and who was also implicated, got off with a $1 fine—because the judge said he seemed like such a "fine fellow."

"A veteran returning home after the war became a citizen and a person capable of handling his own affairs," Judge Davidson remarked from the bench. In explaining his leniency toward the real estate operators, the judge also pointed out that real estate had gone up since the deals were made—so the veterans weren't really losing anything.

Head of Home Builders

Of the cases in court so far, the only operator who has pleaded not guilty is R. S. Shelburne, former president of the Dallas Home Builders. By strange coincidence, he is also the only operator who has paid the overcharge back to veterans. This repayment in itself would seem to be a confession of guilt. But when Shelburne saw how the other cases were going, he pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial.

Defiantly, Shelburne's lawyers told newsmen they would fight the case to the Supreme Court even if he got fined a 3-cent postage stamp. Five hours of jury discussion resulted in a hung jury and Judge Davidson adjourned court until October 25—when the rest of the veterans housing cases will be heard before the same jury.

"No," replied Judge Davidson, "this jury is all right."

Merry-Go-Round

The Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division is booby-trapping Governor Dewey. It is filing dozens of anti-trust suits against some of the biggest monopolies in America so that the Republicans will be forced to prosecute them or else show their love for big business after Dewey is elected . . . The Demos didn't have enough money to put President Truman on the air, but they have invested $50,000 for a comic book on the life of Harry Truman . . . Two members of the Atomic Energy Commission, Chairman David Lilienthal and Herbert Hoover's old aide, Lewis Strauss, plan to resign if Dewey is elected. Lilienthal is tired of government and wants to resign anyway . . . General Eisenhower turns down as many as 100 speaking invitations a day.

'What's New in the Home' Is Theme

By Conrad P. Harness

A NINE-DAY extravaganza glorifying the home gets underway today at 1 p. m. at the National Guard Armory, 19th and East Capitol sts. se., as the city's organized homebuilders open their second annual National Capital Home Show Exposition.

"If it's in the house, the Home Show has it," might well be the theme of this year's production, which fills up 80,000 square feet of floor area in the vast Armory.

There'll be attractions such as a Dahlia Show, the $435,000 Colleen Moore doll house, free gifts from a roving "quiz master," and orchids flown from Hawaii and given to lady visitors at specified times.

Elaborate ceremonies will open the housing revue, James A. Pearson, executive director, Home Builders Association, has announced. Starting at 1 p. m. today, A. Milton Talbert, general chairman of the Home Show Committee will introduce Clarence W. Gosnell, president, Home Builders Association. Gosnell will introduce the main speaker, Franklin D. Richards, Commissioner, Federal Housing Administration.

At completion of the brief ceremonies on the front steps of the Armory, Mrs. Gosnell will cut a ribbon to open the nine-day event. A guard of honor for the ceremonies will be furnished by the 163d Military Police Battalion, District National Guard. After the ribbon-cutting ceremony the National Guardsmen will march into the Armory, followed by show officials and guests.

Prior to the ceremonies, the District National Guard Band will provide a band concert in front of the Armory.

Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard; Leonard A. Walsh, chairman of the Board of the National Guard Armory and Arthur "Dutch" Bergman, director of the National Guard Armory, will attend ceremonies as invited guests.

Radio's "give-away" craze will attract plenty of competition from the Home Show. Over $10,000 in home equipment will be given away during the 9-day exposition.

Top prize is a $3500 furnished "vacation cottage" made of aluminum and plywood. This will go to the winner of the "Home Show Queen Contest," to be chosen by audience applause at the Armory. Any woman is eligible to try for the numerous awards to be given "Queen" entrants. Rules may be obtained at 426 Investment Building. The contest deadline is October 22.

There will be 16 semifinalists selected to appear at the Armory at various times. From these will be picked a queen. "Maids of Honor" and "Princesses" will also be chosen on different nights. All will receive valuable prizes. Through a process of elimination, any woman who enters the contest has 16 chances toward winning the top honors.

Home Show officials emphasize that the competition is not strictly a beauty contest. Judging will also take into consideration general appearance, personality, poise and personal achievements.

Rest for the Weary!

Home Show visitors—remember Booth 58! Tour the entire show, see all the marvelous exhibits, finger the new products, dream your dreams of a new home filled with wonderful equipment—and then come to Booth 58! You'll say it's the nicest spot in the entire Armory—because you'll find plenty of chairs to rest those tired feet!

Yes, it's the booth of The Washington Post. It's there for your convenience. Make it your headquarters. Meet your friends, leave messages, or just rest—you're extremely welcome in any case. Don't forget, it's Booth 58!

Transit Schedules

Capital Transit Co. has promised shuttle bus service to the Armory for the Home Show. It will begin today according to E. E. Boyd, superintendent of transportation. Visitors going to the Armory from the Northeast are advised to use route B2 which travels in both directions on 17th st. se., approximately 1300 feet from the Armory. Patrons using this B2 service should get off at the stop located at 17th st. se., at East Capitol st. The B2 route makes connections with the Mount Pleasant car routes 40 and 42 at 14th and East Capitol sts. and at 13th and D sts. ne.

On display will be this Milo Cabinet Wall. Designed for compactness, even the small fry have their individual shelves and hangers.

Builders, Attention

The Gals Have a Say About Home Features

ARCHITECTS and builders who plan homes for speculative sales should remember that the weaker sex controls the Nation's purse strings. If they don't, the saw and hammer crowd is stepping into an economic booby trap. That's what three of the city's top women property promotion artists tell us.

McGINNISS

Women own more common stocks than men, they live longer, have more of a say in child training, buy the bulk of "soft goods" output—and they are the best prospects for home ownership.

And what do these important folks want in the way of a house? Frances Powell Hill, realtor, who heads her own office, says the first thing a discriminating woman considers is location. She wants to buy in a neighborhood where she and her family will feel at home and have the advantages and social life to which they are accustomed.

"After drawing a circle, figuratively speaking, around the chosen area, the house itself comes under consideration," she said. "The colonial or straight-front town house is largely the choice of the established, older woman. The majority of young matrons and single women react most favorably to the clean-cut modern architecture as a setting for their modern furnishings or heirlooms. Of course, there is an occasional "period enthusiast" who requires anything from a primitive hut to Corinthian columns, as the case may be."

Along this same vein, Mrs. Lillian H. McGinniss, head of Walker & Dunlop, Inc.'s Georgetown sales office, points out that women definitely want something different in the way of housing. "They don't want to be saddled with the result of mass production lines which toss out an identical type of housing. It's sort of like buying a hat. No woman likes to see dozens of other women wearing her hat!"

All the lady realtors agree, too, that sales are often made in the kitchen, figuratively speaking. Laura Harlan, head of Laura Harlan & Co., declared that "whatever type of house is most appealing, prospective buyers are searching for that completely modern kitchen which boasts the latest labor-saving equipment, such as an electric dish washer and garbage disposal unit.

"The woman of the family often must do all the preliminary looking for a house without the advice of a busy husband," Miss Harlan continued. "When she returns home and tells in glowing terms that night about the lovely house she inspected today, she is often brought down to earth by a terse "What type of heating unit" from the practical man of the house. She has taken it for granted that the heating is all right and the agent's description of the heating system simply didn't register. However, husbands will be relieved to hear that the vast majority of heating units today are either oil or gas, thereby giving him an extra hour or two sleep in the morning."

Miss Hill has a word of advice to those who would like to exercise latent architectual tendencies and "do over" a house: "Some have only the "yen"; they must also have the "ken" before being exposed to a fine old masterpiece. There are too few genuine examples of seventeenth and eighteenth century architecture left to risk them in unskilled hands."

Mrs. McGinniss has this to say to builders: "Take advantage of the small cost entailed in partly finishing the attic, for here is the place where women's ingenuity is challenged and which affords an outlet for any latent talent she may have.

"Also," she added, "it is a grave mistake on a builder's part to omit a full basement with an exterior entrance. Women demand these items."

Gals, if you're in the mood for a change of scenery, remember Miss Harlan's advice: "House hunting is an interesting sport from every angle and the season is always open."

Gold-Plated Washers Are Show Prizes

GOLD plated washing machines, 18-karat gold at that, will be given to four lucky women at the Home Show Exposition. They're not only gold plated, they also boast "silver fronts," according to the Home Builders Association, show sponsors.

The washers, worth $400 each, will be awarded as special gifts to four daily winners in the "Home Show Queen" contest. The four winners will be chosen from among the 128 contest semifinalists, chosen in advance of appearance at the Armory by a contest committee named by the building association.

The automatic washers are the gift of Southern Wholesalers, Inc., Bendix division. Show sponsors emphasize that the 128 semifinalists invited to appear at the Armory will not be chosen primarily on the basis of beauty.

All husbands are warned it isn't the initial cost (80c admission) that hurts, it's the upkeep on the many wonderful things the little lady is liable to see and want.

Over 125 exhibitors have purchased space at the exposition, hoping to win friends and influence sales. The sponsors, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, predict this year's attendance will better that of last year's 80,000.

In addition to exhibits of paying sponsors,

Artists Say Home Is Best 'Gallery'

A GROUP of local artists believe that contemporary art has dwelt too long in museums and art galleries—they want to see more of their productions hanging in the average home.

That's why the Society of Washington Artists will hold a special display of contemporary art at the Home Show Exposition. Everyone visiting the exposition will be given the opportunity to vote by ballot on their art favorites on display. All are by local professionals.

"These creative works are seen too seldom by the general public," said Sheffield Kagy, president of the Society of Washington Artists. "They have been selected for display as suitable and representative examples of art for the modern American home. All are originals."

On Prices of New Homes

FHA Tells What Our Wallets Can Stand

By Franklin D. Richards

Commissioner, Federal Housing Administration

JUST because a family has an income of $4000 a year, it does not necessarily follow they can afford to buy a $10,000 house.

The old rules of thumb that a family can afford a house valued at 2½ times its annual income, and monthly mortgage payments should not exceed 25 per cent of income are not used as criteria by the Federal Housing Administration in determining the risk involved in connection with an insured mortgage loan transaction.

RICHARDS

Specific ratios, such as these rules of thumb that have been repeated so many times they have been accepted as infallible by many, are not practicable for a number of reasons. There are variations in local conditions, different family housing needs, living standards, obligations and other conditions affecting ability to pay.

Because secure home ownership is a prime objective of the insured mortgage plan of the FHA, continuing studies are made by the administration with respect to ranges of housing expense paid by home owners of different income groups. The data provide a cross section of the amounts of housing expense families believe and demonstrate they are able to pay.

Average characteristics of mortgagors' annual income based on FHA insured mortgages secured by new single-family, owner-occupied homes show that families with an average income of about $2300 have a home valued at $5894; the total monthly mortgage payment is $37.53, and the total housing expense including maintenance, water, gas, electricity, fuel, etc., runs $55.42.

For the family with an average annual income of approximately $4400 the home has a valuation of $8555; the monthly mortgage payment is $57.55, and the total monthly housing expense amounts to $78.74. The family with an $8000 income buys a $10,500 house, with a $70.77 mortgage payment and total housing expense of $93.49.

Present price levels present many problems, but there is no question about the great waiting market for housing at lower levels. The provisions of the housing bill of 1948, signed by the President on August 10, constitute an important step in the production of housing at lower sale and rental prices.

It should be clearly understood that the Federal Housing Administration does not lend money nor build housing. It insures loans made by private lending institutions for the construction, modernization or acquisition of housing. In performing this function the FHA is self-supporting even though it is a public service Government agency. Last fiscal year the FHA's income exceeded 39 million dollars after payment of all operating expenses and losses.

Today the biggest demand for housing is for homes priced at around $5000 to $6000. The new legislation offers special incentives for the production of dwellings in this price range and for more rental housing for families of veterans and the low income group.

Buyer Puts 5% Down

ONE of the new insurance plans provides for loans up to 95 per cent of value on low-cost single-family dwellings, and another includes insurance of mortgages on multifamily projects that constitute a maximum of 90 or 95 per cent of value under certain circumstances.

In addition to these new insurance plans there is also the program to encourage site fabrication methods and the manufacture of housing.

The new legislation offers new opportunities and the FHA has issued practical and workable rules and regulations to the end that American families may be better housed.

Monument Speed-up

The first elevator in the Washington Monument required 10 minutes to ascend and another 10 minutes to descend the 555-foot shaft. Today, a high-speed Otis elevator makes a one-way trip there in 70 seconds.

Fame and Fortune Awaits 'Miss Home Show Queen'

It's fast becoming a really attractive home. The hazel-eyed brunette has been married for two years

A statuesque blonde of Norwegian extraction, Mrs. Marjorie Keen, at only 21, is the mother of two small sons, has won an art scholarship; does drawing, sketching and modeling in clay. Her work has won acclaim in exhibits at the Children's Museum. In spare hours she designs and makes her own dresses

Prices Coming Down? Use Your Own Crystal Ball, Says Builder

By Clarence W. Gosnell

President, Home Builders Association

WILL THE SALE prices of new houses continue to rise as they have since the war, or have we reached a peak, and will prices now decline? Those are the questions many prospective homeowners are asking builders, and which the builders are asking each other.

We do not know the answers, and we don't think anyone does. There are two forces, each pulling in the opposite direction, which will have considerable influence upon—and perhaps determined entirely the trend of future prices.

GOSNELL

Tremendous production will level prices. In addition we are building in a market in which the housing shortage is being met and in which the demand is being satisfied.

Construction is going exceptionally well throughout the United States. It is a peak year in Washington. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 15,050 housing units were started in the metropolitan area during the first eight months of 1948. This may be compared with the 12,170 started in the same period of 1947, and the 7290 on which construction was commenced during the same 1946 period. The number constructed in the first eight months of this year is greater than that for any other eight-month period.

Labor Biggest Factor

HIGHER prices for materials and increases in on-site labor construction costs are the principal items which are inflationary, even though housing has not increased as much as many other commodities. Transportation has played a part. Of course large production also increases the amount of bidding for available supplies of materials and labor.

Few individuals realize the large percentage of the sale price of a house which is represented by labor costs. This includes both on-site labor and that required to manufacture the various materials used in the construction of a house, such as bricks, steel, lumber, cement and glass.

It is the labor that is placed upon them that creates the value. Even the lumber required for a $10,000 frame house would probably cost less than $100 in the form of trees standing in the forest.

The outcome of the critical international situation will have considerable bearing on future housing prices. Should the rearmament program reach gigantic proportions it will undoubtedly employ many of the workmen now engaged in home construction and absorb a substantial amount of raw materials which would otherwise go into housing.

Little Items Add Up

MANY smaller items, not always considered by the public, have also caused price increases. Among these are higher permit fees, additional charges for sewer and water connections and most other subdivision requirements.

The mortgage market is also creating difficulties. There is less construction money available and financing homes for purchasers is becoming more of a problem. Until about a year ago financing was not difficult. Today this is a problem because many mortgage bankers have already made enormous investments in housing and in many instances they have reached their maximum.

Most builders usually figure on a profit of 10 per cent, and consider themselves fortunate if they make it. Many end up with considerably less. Such a profit is necessary, particularly in view of the large investment required and the risks assumed. The business is 100 per cent competitive and is open to all. There is no registration necessary. Furthermore, home building is one of the most hazardous, from a financial viewpoint.

As the housing shortage decreases in the medium and lower price brackets, the demand for labor will not be as great, and the builder will be able to be more selective in the persons he employs. This will result in higher productivity.

Under normal conditions, as a surplus of materials is created, prices will fall, and the cost resulting from construction delays (due to lack of materials) will be minimized. Just when the sale prices of houses will stop the gradual climb (which has been consistent during the last three years), and start downward is not known. A great deal depends upon Government spending and the European Recovery Program. Most important of all, however, will be the rearmament program.

FHA Gives the Answer

How Much Can a Family Afford To Pay in Buying Its House?

IN BUILDING or buying a home, the most important decision a family has to make is whether or not it can afford the type of house that meets its requirements. Often this family problem is brought to the mortgage loan officer of a lending institution. This problem can be determined reliably, not by any rule-of-thumb method, but only by an analysis of the family's resources, income and expenses in relation to the cost of the home.

The first step is to determine the kind of home needed, its total cost, how it can be financed and the monthly costs of home ownership. The prospective home purchaser may obtain this information by consulting the builder, real estate agent and lending institution. The following schedule will aid in compiling this information and calculating the approximate monthly cost of owning the home:

1. Estimated cost of home ..... $_____
2. LESS amount of down payment ..... $_____
3. Balance to be paid by mortgage loan ..... $_____
4. Estimated monthly payment on mortgage loan, including principal, interest and mortgage insurance. (Estimate at the rate of $6 per thousand of amount on line 3, sufficiently accurate for this analysis) ..... $_____
5. Monthly cost of taxes and hazard insurance ..... $_____
6. Monthly cost of maintenance and repairs ..... $_____
7. Monthly cost of heat and utilities ..... $_____
8. Total estimated monthly housing expense (Total of lines 4, 5, 6 and 7) ..... $_____

You now have the approximate cost of the home, down payment and required monthly payment. The next step is to consider the monthly cost of home ownership in relation to family resources, income and expenditures. The following simple budget may be used to estimate the portion of the monthly income which will be available for housing expense:

9. Monthly income from salaries and other sources ..... $_____

Less deductions for:

10. Income taxes .. $.....
11. Social Security ..... $.....
12. Any other deductions .... $.....
13. Total .. $_____
14. Net monthly income (Line 9 minus line 13) ..... $_____

Less deductions for:

15. Food ..... $.....
16. Clothing ..... $.....
17. Insurance .... $.....
18. Medical expense ..... $.....
19. Education ... $.....
20. Automobile ... $.....
21. Transportation $.....
22. Recreation ... $.....
23. Emergencies and all other expense ..... $.....
24. Total .. $_____
25. Estimated monthly amount available for housing expense (Line 14 minus line 24) ..... $_____

In analyzing the above information, the following questions should be answered:

Are you financially able to meet the amount of down payment shown in line 2 without creating an obligation in addition to the mortgage loan?

What is the amount of monthly housing expense that you have been paying, and have you been able to accumulate any savings while paying this amount?

How does the amount shown as estimated monthly housing expense for your home (line 8) compare with your present housing expense?

If the amount of your present housing expense has precluded any accumulation of savings from your monthly income, then it ordinarily will not be sound to contract for a monthly housing expense of a larger amount, unless you are now receiving a proportionately larger stable income.

How does the amount of estimated monthly housing expense compare with the amount which you estimate to be available for housing expense on line 25?

Obviously, the proposed monthly housing expense in any event should not exceed the amount which you estimate to be available on line 25. The amount you propose to pay for your new home should be one you can easily meet each month. It should not be an amount which would constitute a long-term heavy burden and require a reduced standard of living.

New Radiant Heating System to Be Shown

A system of radiant heating, to be displayed at the Home Show-Exposition, causes no dehydration of the air, its developers claim.

Radiant glass heating panels spell goodby to bulky basement furnaces, blowers, coal trucks, unsightly radiators and expensive hot air heating systems, say their manufacturers.

The radiant glass heating units, one to a room, provide thermostatic control with different temperatures in each room, if desired. Units are merely fastened to walls, and plugged into the nearest electrical unit.

Its developers claim that in addition to no dehydration, its other benefits are that it doesn't burn up oxygen, allows more wall space, and greater opportunity for harmonious interior decoration.

Housing Aids Listed

Foley Calls for More Houses, Lower Prices

By Raymond M. Foley
Administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency

A YEAR AGO the primary concern in housing was to raise production. We centered most of our emphasis and a ds on this goal and home-building rose rapidly to 850,000 units, begun in 1947, with more than 550,000 begun in the first seven months of this year.

The problem now is to maintain and augment that production, for we will need, according to most estimates, well over a million homes a year for a good many years to catch up with our needs and to make substantial inroads on our heavy backlog of obsolete houses.

FOLEY

In order to assure continued high production, we must have an adequate market. The price level at which most of our housing is being built today, particularly in our larger cities, is too high to sustain a steady and assured market for years to come. Means must be found to produce more housing of the types and prices needed by a large proportion of our people in order to support a stable and prosperous industry at high productive levels. To serve our people and our industry alike, we must convert more of our need into effective demand.

Making more homes available to more people calls, in general, for two things. One is to relate the prices of houses that are produced to the pocketbooks of a larger proportion of those who seek homes. The other is to provide a larger amount of rental housing so that those who buy homes will do so through choice, and not through compulsion.

Neglects Low Incomes

THE National Housing Act of 1948, passed at the special session of Congress, goes part of the way toward stimulating more housing in the lower cost and rental fields. It still neglects those with incomes too low to purchase or rent even with considerable reduction in costs and it fails to institute measures needed to promote slum clearance in our cities.

It provides, however, some promising Federal aids that emphasize production at lower cost, most of which had been previously recommended by the Administration. Instead of making it easier for the buyer to borrow at higher prices, it seeks primarily to make it easier for the builder to build and the investor to lend at lower prices.

It offers relatively more attractive aids in price ranges that have accounted for only a small amount of our homebuilding heretofore in most of our cities. It contains special assistance for builders who utilize cost-saving methods of construction and house production. It provides Government support for investments, both direct and from lenders, in rental housing.

It offers special financial help for housing cooperatives, especially those for World War II veterans. It established for the first time in the Federal Government a limited authority to carry on research and study, in cooperation with private industry, to speed up cost reduction, principally through the improvement of building codes and the standardization of materials assembled into a house.

Industry Cooperation

THESE measures are not cure-alls. They must be coupled with resourcefulness and determination by the homebuilding and financing industry in their application before they result in the housing needed. The industry, however, has been increasingly aware of the necessity for bringing down the cost of housing to the consumer in order to maintain a prosperous market for its product, and a number of encouraging projects are going forward in various parts of the country that represent earnest efforts toward this end.

We have had an encouraging response from industry representatives in meetings held through the country under the sponsorship of the Federal Housing Administration and the National Association of Homebuilders to explain and activitate the new programs.

Our principal task in the Housing and Home Finance Agency today, as I see it, is to make use of every means at our command to make it possible for private industry to build at lower prices and to enable investors to finance a greater volume of rental housing.

Despite our high current level of homebuilding, our housing task is bigger now than ever before, chiefly because of the high costs. Its solution calls for cost cutting, profit paring, ingenuity and hard work, and for willing cooperation between Government and industry. It is a challenge that I am confident can be met. Certainly, it is one in which we must not fail.

A New Item

Stair Lift For Homes On Display

ONE of the many novel, yet practical, exhibits planned for visitors to the Washington Home Show is a new item in the field of home conveniences — a stair lift, designed for people who find stair-climbing difficult or dangerous.

Built by a firm of local elevator and hoisting engineers, the stair lift consists of an upholstered chair that travels up and down the side of a structural steel guide rail, arranged to resemble the ordinary baseboard usually placed at the wall line of stairways.

The guide rail is fastened to the floor at the bottom and top of the stairs, with an intermediate fastening to one of the center steps when needed in very long flights of stairs.

To operate, the user merely sits down on the chair seat and places his feet on a small rest located about an inch above the floor. A small control lever is placed conveniently near the normal position of the right hand on the chair arm, and movement of the lever produces action of the chair.

The chair and hoisting mechanism are built in one standard size for either right or left side mounting, and the guide rail is cut to the exact length of the individual stairway. No alteration to the structure or stairway is necessary.

'Battle Plan' for Show Had 8 Generals

BANKS — PEARSON — TALBERT — LEE — CARR — DANIEL

CHAMBERLAIN — BEITZELL

PLANNING, arranging and staging an extravaganza as large as the Home Show which starts today at the National Guard Armory, is "a job of tremendous magnitude, requiring exhaustive work on the part of many individuals," says A. Milton Talbert, chairman of the exposition.

In addition to the honorary and advisory committees, there are six hard-working committees responsible for arrangements. Not only has the staff of the Home Builders Association, under the direction of James W. Pearson, executive director, been largely expanded, but in addition, Anne Albaugh, experienced feature writer, has been engaged as coordinator of women's activities, including the "Home Show Queen Contest."

Preparations have been almost a year in the making, having started just after last year's show closed. The physical arrangements in connection with the armory, the allotment and sale of space, publicity, awards, entertainment and the other multitudinous tasks which must be performed all go into the making of a successful home show.

The committee in charge of space allocation and sales has had one of the most difficult of all assignments. The association's vice president, William S. Banks, is chairman of this committee.

Proper publicity in connection with the show is most important. Regardless of how stupendous the show may be, unless the public is properly informed, it cannot be a success. J. Garrett Beitzell, as chairman of the publicity committee, has assumed this task.

The work of the floor committee really began in earnest on Tuesday, when exhibitors started moving into the National Guard Armory. T. Girard Lee, Montgomery County builder, heads this group.

U. S. Science Is Concocting New Materials

RESEARCH on metals used in building has brought about new uses for old materials, development of new materials, more efficient structural designs, and savings in both labor and materials, the Construction Industry Information Committee has announced.

"Great emphasis has been placed recently on the development of light materials for light loads, bringing economy both in the use of material and in handling by labor, and in many cases greater convenience to owners of buildings, the committee said.

"As a result, we now have light steel framing for house construction, which may be used with any type of covering and is applicable to any style of house. Light-gauge steel also provides a new structural or system which enables the electric wiring system in commercial buildings to be revised according to changing needs with negligible cutting or patching of floors, walls, and ceilings.

"Development of aluminum alloys has biven us many widely used light-weight products: vertically swinging garage doors, double-hung and casement window sash, revolving and swirging doors, frames, roofing, siding, ashing, eaves troughs and downspouts, and all kinds of ornamental work.

"Since aluminum keeps weight down, it has made power tools, such as electric hand saws and drills and other more efficient equipment, feasible for use by building workers. Structural use of aluminum has also expanded greatly.

"Magnesium has also worked its way into builders' equipment, weighing a third less than aluminum and now available in quantity

Movie Star's Famed Doll House Here

A $435,000 jeweled doll house, nine years in the making and built perfectly to scale, will be on display in the booth of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. at the Home Show Exposition.

It's the world famous Colleen Moore doll house. The former movie star was responsible for the fairyland doll house becoming a reality. She has collected miniatures ever since childhood.

By 1929 her collection so overflowed her home that her father suggested they build a real doll house . . . one fit for a fairy princess. When it was finished (it took 700 artisans nine years to complete it), she decided to send it on a tour of the country.

Made for a fairy princess, the turreted gray stone miniature castle is 9 feet square and 11 feet high, and weighs over 6000 pounds. There are 11 rooms, including Aladdin's garden, and contains treasures from the ages, rare gems, silver and gold from all over the world. It is a museum in itself, rivaled only by museums tenfold in size.

Some 2000 tiny objects of furnishings adorn the fairyland castle, including a weeping willow tree that really weeps; a three-inch radio and a chandelier with electric lights no larger than grains of wheat.

Among the myriad of other wonders is a modern library of hand-written books by noted authors, Cinderella's coach of silver, a rock-a-bye baby tree that bends and sways in the breeze, two 400-year-old amber vases which once belonged to the Dowager Empress of China, a dining room which represents that of King Arthur, miniature paintings of Little Red Riding Hood, Snow White and many other favorites of fairyland folklore.

Home Costs Under Bill Itemized

A CONVENIENT breakdown of insured mortgage payments of new single-family homes has been released by the Federal Housing Administration. The facts will guide prospective home buyers interested in purchasing a new home financed under Title II of the National Housing Act, amended by the special session of Congress on August 10, 1948.

It is important to note that the monthly mortgage payment does include payment on the principal, interest at 4½ per cent, and FHA insurance premium charges. It does not include charges for real estate taxes and hazard insurance, which must be added to the monthly payment. Breakdown is courtesy of the Division of Research and Statistics, FHA.

Most Oak Flooring Made In Southern Regions

Approximately 85 per cent of all the hardwood flooring produced in the United States is turned out in the Southern and Appalachian regions. Between 85 and 90 per cent of the output in those areas consists of oak. The remainder is made up of hard maple, beech, birch and pecan, all of which are regarded as well-suited for residential use.

D. C.'s Growing Pains Insure Healthy Market, Realtor Says

By Raymond M. Taylor
President, Washington Real Estate Board

IT GIVES ME GREAT pleasure to express my congratulations to the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington on the very interesting and informative home show which it is now presenting in the National Guard Armory. I strongly recommend that this splendid exhibit be seen by everyone.

With attention so graphically focused upon housing, I have been requested to give my opinion as to the outlook for housing and real estate in the near future in this area.

I am very optimistic regarding the business prospects during the balance of 1948 and the next several years, and believe there will be considerable activity by owners, builders and brokers. My reasons are based partly on the following facts:

Because of the great increase in population in Washington and nearby areas during the past 15 years, and particularly since 1940, there has been an ever-increasing demand for houses and apartments, both for sale and for rent.

TAYLOR

During the war and immediately following it, the Government greatly restricted all building, but since the restrictions were removed, builders have produced an unprecedented volume of housing. At this time there are thousands of rental apartments and houses for sale under various stages of construction here which will be completed and ready for possession during the remainder of 1948 and early 1949.

The local FHA insuring office recently announced that under the veterans' housing program, as of September 1, 1948, there had been 252 active applications for mortgage insurance received and processed by that office. Commitments to insure mortgages had been issued up to that date on 243 applications representing 21,363 housing units, construction has started on 123 projects, with 11,139 units. Thirty-eight projects have been completed comprising 2454 units.

These thousands of apartment units and houses will reduce the housing shortage to a great extent and bring us closer to a normal housing market. On the other hand, I believe that Washington will continue to grow and the normal future demands for housing here will cause builders to proceed with most of the housing plans now completed, or on their drawing boards.

Few people question that Washington, a world center, will continue to expand for many generations. The demand for both building materials and labor will thus continue, even though general inflation has driven the price of both materials and labor to an all-time high.

It is reported that construction of approximately 14,500 new housing units of all types (including projects financed by both Government and private funds) was started during the first seven months of this year in the metropolitan area. This represents a gain of about 38 per cent over the number started during the same period of 1947.

There is every reason to believe that this same ratio of increase will continue for the balance of this year and during 1949, unless an emergency arises which will curtail the manufacture of essential building materials.

An official of the Bureau of Labor Statistics recently reported that despite continuing increases in costs there is no evidence at this time of a decline in construction in the Washington area. This same official also reported that over 60 per cent of the housing units authorized thus far in 1948 in this area are for rental occupancy in apartment buildings, as compared to the 45 per cent rental unit ratio for the entire year of 1947.

Nationally, Government officials predict that this country will continue to have a number of years of high construction volume and state that all types of construction are running higher than last year, except industrial, military and public housing.

Notwithstanding the optimistic predictions expressed here in the light of the great volume of housing construction now in progress or planned to be started in the immediate future, it is my opinion that caution, careful study, and some restraint should be exercised by local builders to guard against the economic danger of over-building housing units and thus prevent our city from enjoying a sound growth through a healthy and normal real estate market.

Some concern and consideration have already been shown regarding such a possibility by the recent announcement of Government housing officials that F. H. A. mortgage loan commitments will only be granted in the immediate future for the construction of very low-rental housing units.

Also, there has been a tendency recently on the part of local banks, building and loan associations, insurance companies and other lending institutions to be more conservative in the lending of funds for construction purposes, particularly for large multi-unit apartment projects.

The office situation in the downtown business district has changed considerably since the end of the war, due largely to our Government, and other governments, vacating millions of square feet to private industry.

There has also been some new construction in office buildings, the largest of which was the 12-story Ring Building on the corner of 18th and M sts. nw. Two other large, modern office buildings are to be built soon, one of 10 stories on I st. between 16th and 17th sts., adjoining the Army-Navy Club, which will contain approximately 200,000 square feet of space, and the other 12 stories on the northwest corner of Vermont ave. and K st. to contain about 65,000 square feet.

Those who specialize in the leasing of commercial properties here have witnessed a substantial increase in demand from the larger out-of-town chain store companies, many of which have already opened new units locally or are awaiting the completion of store units now under construction.

The steady and healthy growth of our great city and its environs, plus government payrolls (at present totaling about 65 million dollars monthly, paid to 233,000 employes) have attracted large chain store companies for many years and this trend is steadily increasing.

Good evidence of this is shown by the recent openings of the beautiful new stores of Neisner's at 12th and G sts. nw.; Franklin Simon, on upper Connecticut ave., and of Peck & Peck on lower Connecticut ave. near Dupont Circle, all a credit to our city.

Many of the better known variety and five and ten cent store chains, as well as large shoe and women's wear companies, have opened, or are in the process of opening, attractive stores both in our downtown city-central business district and in the beautiful new shopping centers in the suburban business areas.

These substantial chain organizations realize the potential volume of business to be derived from units of their companies in successful shopping centers, located in Silver Spring and Bethesda, Md.; Clarendon, Arlington, Shirlington, and Alexandria, Va., as well as in the busy, growing neighborhoods within the District proper.

The trend of all of these chain companies is to compete with each other in the opening of larger and more attractively designed stores, with air conditioning, fluorescent lighting, escalators, and many other modern features. Both the Hecht Company's new store at Silver Spring and the new Neisner store in downtown Washington were built without windows, except the ground floor show windows, are lighted on the interior with the most modern type of fluorescent fixtures, are ventilated by means of air conditioning, and have escalators.

A Room for Redecorators

Tucked off in many an old house is a small cubicle originally a sewing room. Many of these have fallen into disuse and become catchalls, usually because they were gloomy or cramped. Such space can be made one of the most valuable rooms in the home for sewing, reading or study, by brightening it up with gay wallpaper or paint; a colorful asphalt tile floor; soft but brilliant lighting, and cheerful draperies. Plain pastel tints are best.

A wallpaper in faintly lined plaid or banded with plain colors will make the small room cheery. Rugs with intricate designs or dark patterns are best avoided in a small room. Light gray or turquoise asphalt tile marbleized with cream or pale yellow will add brightness. If the room is used for sewing, scraps or cloth and thread are whisked up from this smooth surface flooring without effort.

Home Builders Offer 'Economy House'

By Milton J. Brock

President, National Association of Home Builders

THE NATION'S home builders are meeting housing needs by producing for all income groups at a record rate. Research has streamlined building methods, increased construction speed and raised the quality level of today's new house.

Far in excess of two million homes have been erected since VJ-Day. This is enough housing to shelter every person in Denver, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Indianapolis, Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Seattle, Toledo, Rochester, Des Moines, Boston, San Francisco and St. Louis. Home builders this summer were building houses at the unprecedented rate of 550 family units per hour.

Evidence of how builders have provided for the mass market is found in Government records. Families with annual incomes of less than $5000 bought 82 per cent of all homes sold in 1947, according to the United States Federal Reserve Board. Thirty-nine per cent were purchased by families with yearly incomes of less than $3000.

BROCK

In 1947 four out of five homes, new and used, were purchased for less than $10,000, half of these selling for less than $5000.

There's a Silver Lining

PLANS for the future are definite and encouraging. Builders have turned industriously to the development of the "economy house." Specifically, the "economy house" will be found in the $4500-$7000 range. Varying in size and costs, depending upon geographic and climatic conditions, this house is built on high construction standards. The accent is on simplicity and comfort. The "economy house" is smaller, less elaborate, but efficiently designed. It has a minimum of gadgets, but is durable, and most important, a complete living unit.

We should not confuse the "economy house" with the minimum or "stripped down" house which has been built in many areas to meet a temporary need. The "economy house" represents a home investment which will endure.

Under the sponsorship of the National Association of Home Builders, the drive for streamlined construction systems, standardized house components and economical uses for new materials has already shown remarkable results. Large low-cost developments have taken form in many sections of the country. Thousands who never owned their home now have modern dwellings in planned communities.

Here are some examples. A prominent Topeka, Kans., home builder is producing two-bedroom houses featuring storage walls and other space-saving facilities. This house sells for $5600 including the lot, and monthly payments are $43. These homes are constructed on a concrete slab foundation. They have gypsum dry wall construction and attic insulation.

Production Lines

A MIAMI builder has erected hundreds of two and three-bedroom homes selling for $7200 and $7900, respectively. The price includes a landscaped lot, 65 by 112 feet. Extras are washing machine, electric range, hot water heater, refrigerator and settlement costs. This home is a one-story frame building erected on a concrete slab foundation, paved with asphalt tile. Constructed economies were effected through site fabrication of house components and mechanization of the building process from start to finish.

In the New York City area, generally considered high cost, a builder has constructed an "economy house" with a full basement, attic and two bedrooms, which sells for $8500. This home, with 750 square feet of floor area, has aluminum windows, copper piping, coal-fired gravity furnace, ceiling insulation, hot water heater and an electric range.

A Baton Rouge, La., project, sponsored by the American Legion, offers two and three bedroom houses selling for $6300 to $7700, including land, landscaping, site improvements, interest, taxes and FHA fees. The financing requires no down payment, with carrying charges of $40 and $49 per month.

Building a substantial, appealing, low-cost house is no small feat in view of rising material and labor costs, but builders are meeting these problems. They are reducing manhours through assembly line methods at the building site. They are using war-born production discoveries to cut down the number of steps required in construction. Wherever possible they are employing new materials to lower costs and reduce working hours.

Other channels through which home builders are approaching the true "economy house" are low cost land acquisition and development, mass material purchases, utilization of every inch of space through advanced design—storage walls instead of closets, built-in bureaus, elimination of halls—and standardization of manufactured units and fittings to meet overall needs.

Roof Aerials For Television Are Outmoded

ROOF and other outside television aerials are unnecessary in 90 to 95 per cent of installations, and will become increasingly so as receiving sets are improved and refined, Skyscraper Management reports in its current issue.

The magazine outlines the results of two studies of the television aerial problem—a problem plaguing owners and managers of apartment buildings in television cities in all parts of the country—arriving at conclusions admittedly at variance with the views of other experts.

Studies Made in Chicago

The studies were made by the Apartment Building Owners and Managers Association of Chicago and the Chicago Real Estate Board.

An important point overlooked by tenants, the publication reports, is that there is not enough roof area in the average building to allow each tenant to install a roof aerial without the inevitable result of one aerial screening out a station and interfering with reception by another.

Various types of inside aerials are available, many of which provide satisfactory results, the magazine points out. These may be installed under a rug, behind a picture, in a cove moulding, or in some other unobtrusive place.

Portable Antennas

Portable inside antennas, which can be stored in a conventional closet or on a shelf when not in use, also are available. Where none of the inside antennas produce a satisfactory picture, the next step recommended is to try an all-channel telebooster.

Surveys have indicated that inside antennas are more efficient in high signal areas, and that different types of building construction have varying effects on reception with inside aerials.

"The television industry is now experimenting with multiple-type antennas from which any number of sets can be operated," the article points out, "but the date at which these aerials will be placed on the market is indefinite. Even though the multiple aerial could be accommodated by the available roof space, the per unit cost of the installation would create a problem for tenants and management."

Electronics May End Mechanical Doorbell

The familiar doorbell push-button may some day disappear, say Otis elevator engineers who now use electronic principles in elevator call buttons. A mere finger touch sets up an electronic chain reaction to flash lights and other signals.

It is said that the same ideas can be applied to all other types of push-buttons, wherever used, to provide more trouble-free service. Nothing moves in the electronic button; it cannot stick and parts cannot wear out. Less electric wire is used than with the ordinary mechanical push-button.

Eight-Month Home Loans Taper in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Real estate mortgages recorded in Washington for the first eight months this year dipped $3,324,000 below the total for the same 1947 period, the Home Loan Bank Board reported yesterday.

Liens of $20,000 or less aggregated $71,296,000 from January through August, compared with $74,620,000 in the corresponding period last year. The figures do not include the suburban area where a large amount of construction activity has been reported.

While less than last year, the amount of financing was sharply higher than the $37,408,000 recorded in the first eight months of 1944 when restrictions on home building were in effect, the HLBB reported.

Savings and loan associations continued as principal mortgage lenders here, accounting for 43 per cent of the period's total. Individuals accounted for 25 per cent, while insurance companies and banks each took 9 per cent.

By types of lenders, here is the box score for mortgages in the District of Columbia alone for the first eight months this year:

	Number	Amount
Savings and loan associations	4284	$30,882,000

Individuals	5105	17,779,000
Miscellaneous lending institutions	1436	10,244,000
Total	12,257	$71,296,000

Dewey's Top Housing Expert Unveils Home Program

By Herman T. Stichman

Commissioner of Housing, State of New York

THE FOURTH YEAR since the end of hostilities finds more talk than action so far as lowering the costs of housing is concerned. Private builders, are, with some notable exceptions, seeking to build for the middle or higher income groups, but at the same time some of them are asserting that Government, at any level, should not take any effective part in aiding to supply housing for the lowest income-earning groups.

Some "public housers," on the other hand, would like Government, at some level, to preempt the entire field and build all housing, even for the middle and higher income families. Each group is blaming the other for most of our past and present difficulties. Neither is right. But we must not let the conflict between these groups obscure the even more fundamental housing problem that still confronts us.

STICHMAN

This is not our first housing emergency. Our troubles of the past three years are similar to those of the early 1920s, but we failed to profit by that experience. The prime fault is the fact that the home-building industry is the only large industry that has never functioned on a scientific basis. We have never had a stabilized home-building program and consequently the history in this field has always been one of booms and busts.

Who's at Fault?

EVERYONE condemns today's high building costs and the lack of a balanced housing program, but there are wide differences of opinion as to just where the fault lies. Some say that labor is not producing at a sufficiently high rate; some that contractors are seeking excessive profits; some blame antiquated building codes; some say that lenders are at fault, and some that our system of distribution of building supplies and materials unduly increases costs.

Let us look at the home-building record. In 1921 we started 449,000 nonfarm dwelling units, 716,000 in 1922 and so on up to 937,000 in 1925. From then on the number of starts declined to 509,000 in 1929, 254,000 in 1931 and 93,000 in 1933.

Our population was increasing during these years, but the depression that followed the stock market collapse caused the doubling up of families that narrowed the market for new homes; therefore, few were built. The number of new permanent starts in 1934 was only 126,000, in 1935 there were 221,000, in 1937 we had 336,000, but it was not until 1939 that we got over half a million, 513,000, which increased to 602,600 the next year, and 706,100 in 1941.

During the ensuing war years there was an appreciable amount of home building only in war-industry centers, the number of new permanent starts being 356,000 in 1942, 191,000 in 1943, 141,800 in 1944, 209,300 in 1945, 670,500 in 1946 and 849,000 in 1947.

Pay Checks Disappeared

WHAT were the building trades workers, who were helping to build the 937,000 houses in 1925, doing in 1933, 1934 and 1935? Most of them were out of their regular jobs, of course. Young men will not train to become apprentices for jobs that do not exist, or where the working year is too short, and they will not enter fields where they will be laid off after 40 on the ground that they are too old to produce. That provides the explanation why, today, the average age of the workers in the building trades is high and production is correspondingly lower than it would be if a sufficient number of new men had gone through the apprentice-to-journeymen stage that follows as a necessary consequence from a balanced home-building economy. If such an economy could be brought about, with a longer working year, it would envisage a sufficient number of new apprentices being trained annually to replace those who are retiring because of age or disability.

What were the industrial plants that produced the building materials and equipment used in the 937,000 new starts in 1925 doing in 1933, 1934 and 1935? What had happened to the employees who were on their payrolls in 1925?

Industrialists are not anxious to enter a field where they may have to shut down their plants every six or seven years or attempt to turn to new lines in order to keep out of bankruptcy. Where lack of stabilization exists, we can only expect to find shortages and black markets. If we could stabilize our home-building economy, the prices of building materials and equipment would be stabilized as well.

Asks Profit Reduction

AND how about the builders who some people say have their investments "paid out" in three to five years? If labor thinks that the builder is doing that, and making an excessive profit, it won't listen very sympathetically when asked to step up its production so that the builder can make an even higher profit.

If labor is asked to open its books and step up production, builders should be willing to follow the same pattern. They could afford to reduce their profits if they were certain that they would be building about the same number of units year after year, instead of having to compete for men and materials in times of high building activity, and then be out of the market for a year or two during building depression.

Mortgage lenders also would be better able to serve the home-building market if costs were stabilized and their risks thereby lessened.

How can we stabilize the home-building economy? Private enterprise has not done it over the years. Some governmental cooperation with private builders—and I mean cooperation and not control—would seem to be essential.

I recently visited a number of European countries to see if they could help us with the answer. Their experimentation with new materials and new building methods is of great importance, as are their ideas in the fields of design and planning, but Government control, which exists in some of them, is not the answer. Nowhere did I find that such control brought costs down. And building costs, if too high, affect the national economy when paid by taxes just as they affect the budget of any individual who wishes to build.

Slum Clearance Policy

THE ROLE that Government—at the proper level—takes should not be one of competing with private enterprises; instead its policy should be designed to help private builders do as much of the job as possible. That is our policy in the State of New York.

Private enterprise, without some form of public aid, has not been able to clear slums and replace the substandard dwellings with decent housing at rentals which the former low-income occupants could afford—at a profit. Therefore, since private enterprise has not been able to do so at a profit without public aid, it has naturally gone to fields where it can build at any profit.

It seems, therefore, that Government, at the proper level, can aid in providing housing for this low income field without interfering with private builders. So, in the State of New York, we have a 435-million-dollar loan fund which we use to make loans to municipalities for slum clearance and low-rent housing for families of low income. Also, New York State may pay up to 13 million dollars annually in the form of subsidies to help reduce the rents in these projects.

In every community, under Governor Dewey's Statewide community development plan, we cooperate with the public as well as with bankers, builders and labor leaders to try to make our projects neighborhood centers which will act as the core of a plan for redevelopment of an entire area. This aids private builders who wish to build nearby.

So far as other income groups are concerned, such as the lower middle income groups, the State of New York has been helping, but we think that that aid should not be in the form of public ownership or operation. Those so-called friends of public housing who are urging that Government should enter the middle income field because private enterprise has not provided enough housing, are really doing a disservice because they are only widening the opposition to any public housing program at all.

No one should be urging Government to enter the higher income field when it has not even finished its first job—that of helping low-income families. Any other course might result in a dislocation of the housing industry so severe as to make it necessary for Government to take over all housing. For if the market of private builders is narrowed to those with the highest incomes only, the consequent decline in volume of their operations, coupled with the competition of Government in the labor and material fields, might prove so burdensome as to make homebuilding unattractive and drive them out altogether.

Tax Incentives

TO HELP the lower middle income groups, we have a limited dividend housing law in New York State under which private builders, in exchange for a limitation on the return on their investments, may obtain partial tax exemptions for housing in the medium rental field. Furthermore, Governor Dewey is sponsoring a program under which veterans may build mutual housing projects under our State limited dividend housing law.

An 800-unit garden-type apartment development has been organized by a group of veterans under this law, with down payments averaging $240 per room, and carrying charges of about $14.10 per room per month, including amortization, heat and all maintenance and operating costs. This is low for the New York City area and indicates what private industry can do in the lower-income group if given some public cooperation and aid.

In an effort to determine how we can stabilize our home-building industry, Governor Dewey sponsored a housing conference in June, attended by 150 leaders in the fields of architecture, contracting, engineering, labor, education, banking and finance and city planning. The home-building economy was dissected and examined, and the recommendations of that conference are being analyzed for publication soon.

The Republican platform contemplates that the States should be aided by the Federal Government to help themselves, just as we in New York State are aiding the people to help themselves.

The Federal Government can be of great help, but its aid should bring down building costs, encourage the States to try to take care of their particular needs and help to stabilize our home-production capacities.

Housing by States

STATES must be encouraged to set up housing programs of their own to fit the particular needs of their people in their region and climate. No master mind in Washington can come up with one plan for each of the 48 States that will be as good as the job that the States—with some aid—could do for themselves.

With respect to public housing, the Federal Government should confine itself to financial grants to the States on some kind of matching basis which will encourage them to go out and do something for themselves. This will help to keep Government at the local level where it belongs; it will prevent the danger of bureaucracy and will lessen the opposition to a Federal housing program. Under an inclusive program, the Federal Government might:

1. Make payments to the States, where needed, to match the subsidy that the States pay to keep down the rents of their public housing project for low-income families. This "matching" need not be on a dollar-for-dollar basis, but may vary according to the problem that must be met.

2. Make payments to match funds set aside by the States for slum clearance where necessary. The Federal grants might be on a variable basis, depending on the seriousness of the slum conditions. This would aid States with area deterioration problems which are beyond their present economic capacity to meet.

3. Guarantee the loan of funds, upon reasonable terms as to interest and amortization, to private builders who will provide housing for middle-income families. This may be tied in with partial municipal tax exemption to aid in reducing rents in projects for lower middle income families, as is done under New York's limited dividend housing law.

4. Provide funds for national research with respect to:

(a) Housing needs, rental and sales markets.
(b) Development of new building materials.
(c) Lowering costs of materials and improving systems of distribution.
(d) Monopolistic practices in all fields relating to home construction.
(e) More efficient and uniform building codes.
(f) Better designing.
(g) Improving building methods.
(h) Labor costs and builders' profits.
(i) Municipal and area planning.

Such a joint Federal-State program should help us to stabilize our home-building economy and bring down building costs. We do not have all the answers in New York State, but we are trying. The program I suggest will mean that all the States will be making the same effort.
